Hull and Spain.

Secretary Hull studied British proposals for American participation in international inquiry into Spanish bombings of civilians.

Spanish insurgent planes made series of raids that left estimated total of 85 noncombatants dead, including three British sailors.

French Troops Move Up.

By the United Press.

Perpignan, Franco-Spanish frontier (Tuesday), June 7.—A contingent of French infantry was dispatched early today from Tarbes to Pémiers on instructions of Premier Edouard Daladier after his personal investigation of three invasions of French territory by Spanish bombers within 10 days.

The contingent, armed with 15 antiaircraft guns, was ordered to the eastern portion of the frontier to augment French forces which have been instructed by Daladier to shoot down any planes which invade French territory in the future.

Daladier mapped a plan of "forceful resistance" with his assembled army and air force commanders after he flew here yesterday.

The premier, who also is minister of national defense, flew from Villa Coublay after nine Spanish bombers of "unestablished identity" flew across the Pyrenees border at 11 a. m. Monday and over French soil where they were driven off by the fire of re-inforced anti-aircraft batteries. The planes dropped no bombs.

Daladier, faced with the demands of Socialists, Liberals and Communists for "drastic action" against the plane incursions, gave personal orders to commanders of the land and air defense units along the border in a conference at Orgeix. Nine Spanish bombers there on Sunday dropped 17 bombs of 200-pound size and damaged the Toulouse-Puigcerda railroad over which enormous quantities of war supplies reach the Spanish loyalists.

Franco Issues Denial.

It was revealed Daladier, foreseeing a national issue over Leftist demands for stern action, told border patrol planes to shoot down—and not simply ground—any invading planes.

[Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco's general staff issued a statement today at Burgos, Spain, that no insurgent planes had been in the air

1,000 Buildings, French Hospital Bombed; 3d Raid at Dawn.

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, China (Tuesday), June 7.—For the ninth successive day Japanese war planes raided horror-stricken Canton today, according to reports reaching here, and bombed the crowded city still digging out from the ruins of yesterday's bombardment.

The raiders came at dawn after a sleepless night in which authorities endeavored to cope with 1,500 casualties from yesterday's deadly attacks.

1,500 Raid Casualties.

Canton, China, June 6.—Japanese air raiders killed or wounded an estimated 1,500 persons today in two heavy raids on Canton.

Chinese officials feared the toll might be even higher as rescue workers searched the ruins of more than 1,000 buildings destroyed or damaged.

Chicago Slovak Says Nazis Plot Czech Division

Charges Hitler and Henlein 'Exploit' Pittsburgh Pact of Two Peoples.

By the United Press.

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, June 6—Dr. Peter Hletko, of Chicago, representative of a million Slovaks in the United States, tonight accused Adolph Hitler and Konrad Henlein of trying to "exploit" the Pittsburgh autonomy agreement of 1918 in order to bring about dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

Dr. Hletko's attack on the German Fuehrer and the leader of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German minority was made shortly after Premier Milah Hodza, in a fervent plea for national unity against the threat of war from across the borders, told 100,000 Czechs and Slovaks "we fear no man."

Hodza's speech was received by his listeners as an open warning to Hitler and Henlein, who are reported to have conferred secretly over the week-end in Bavaria.

The Pittsburgh agreement of June 30, 1918, referred to by Dr. Hletko, was a pact between Czech and Slovak groups in the United States agreeing on "cultural autonomy" for the Slovaks of Czechoslovakia, then in process of creation under the guidance of Woodrow Wilson.

Objects to "Exploitation."

Hletko, leading a delegation of American Slovaks to celebrations here commemorating the twentieth anniversary of the founding of this post-war republic, brought the original copy of the agreement. Hletko said the delegation was on the verge of canceling its trip in order to "prevent our visit from adding fuel to the Sudeten dispute as well as the international complications regarding Czechoslovakia.

"Our purpose in bringing over the Pittsburgh agreement was to bring the Czechs and the Slovaks closer together. We want the Slovaks to have autonomy but within the Czechslovak Republic and we feel close to Father Andrej Hlinko (leader of the Slovak People's Party) because he has made that treaty a part of his party program.

Two Arrested In Kidnaping Of D. C. Man

William Ostmann's Auto Stolen; Pair Halted at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., police last night captured two men about an hour after the kidnaping of a Washington salesman who was forced at gun point to drive to Alexandria, Va., and to surrender his car.

The men were chased for a mile along country roads near the town of Fredericksburg and were stopped only after Policeman A. G. Kendall, standing on the running board of a police car, fired a shot into the gas tank of the fugitive auto and another into one of its tires.

About an hour earlier Washington police had sent out a general radio alarm after William Ostmann, 42, a salesman for the Auth Provision Co., had been kidnaped by two roughly dressed men who carried him in his own automobile from Fourteenth and Water streets southwest to the outskirts of Alexandria.

The men told Ostmann they didn't want the $40 he carried in a pocketbook, but were interested only in his car. Fredericksburg police said the prisoners told them they had got tired of walking and hitching rides and had decided to get an automobile.

Police gave their names as Morgan Jones, 35, Scranton, Pa., and Moscow Parker, 23, Luray, Tex.

Two men forced their way into Ostmann's car as he stopped for a traffic light. Both thrust hands into coat pockets as though carrying guns. They ordered him to "keep your mouth shut and do as you're told."

Ostmann was forced from the car at Russell and Glebe roads at the edge of Alexandria.

House Relief Fight Delays Session's End

Conferees Determined to Oppose Increases in Senate Bill.

$212,000,000 Addition for Aid to Farms Strikes Snag.

By Robert C. Albright.

Plans for a week-end adjournment of Congress faded last night as House conferees on the "spending for recovery" bill decided to battle Senate relief increases. Loose ends of the session's business threatened other last-minute delays.

A majority of the nine-member House conference group agreed at a meeting late yesterday to oppose the Senate addition of $212,000,000 for farm parity price payments and other unbudgeted changes in the relief measure.

When relief conferences open Thursday morning the House committee also will battle Senate postponement of the 10 per cent local contribution requirement on Housing Administration loans and Senate elimination of the Woodrum amendment requiring seven - month "stretching" of WPA funds.

Two other items of unfinished business bobbed up to mar adjournment optimism. A $272,000,000 second deficiency bill, trimmed about $27,000,000 under budget estimates, will be reported to the House today. Rife with minor controversies, the measure must be passed by both Houses before adjournment.

Leaders Pessimistic.

Second barrier (aside from the all-important wage-hour controversy) was the monopoly inquiry asked by the President, and not yet approved by either House. The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the O'Mahoney resolution for a $500,000 anti-trust investigation by six members of Congress and five representatives of Federal agencies. An effort will be made to call it up on the Senate calendar today or tomorrow. The House committee has not yet acted.

Although the President was informed at his legislative conference yesterday that adjournment by Saturday was "possible," leaders took a more pessimistic view as the day wore on.

Amendment Opposed.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who will lead the fight on some of the relief bill changes, said it is "ridiculous" to say Congress can adjourn this week. Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, was guessing "next Monday or Tuesday." And Chairman O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, famed for his spotting of past adjournment dates, declared the sine die gavel will fall about 11:57 p. m. June 18.

Besides Woodrum, House conferees on the relief bill named yesterday by Speaker Bankhead, were

Rabies Warning Given Northeast; 2d Mad Dog Seen

Residents of Langdon, in Northeast Washington, were warned yesterday of stray dogs which might have been exposed to rabies.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland issued the warning after authorities were notified of the second case of a rabid dog, in the 1800 block of Franklin street northeast. The owner, his wife and two children, one 4 years old and the other 16 months, were exposed.

Ruhland said the owner has started Pasteur treatments.

He issued the following warning:

All dogs not on a leash are required by law to wear good, substantial muzzles.

Persons exposed either by bite or contact with saliva should seek the advice of a physician immediately.

The dog suspected should not be killed, but should be tied up for observation.

Eventual Enforcement of 40-Cent Statute Splits Conferees.

By Sidney Olson.

The "little Civil War"—the bitter background struggle between Northern and Southern industries for sectional advantages in the wage-hour bill—found Senate-House conferees still deadlocked last night.

The heavily outnumbered Southerners on the conference committee, beaten back on one front after another, entrenched themselves for a vigorous bitter-end struggle "to keep the upper end open," in the words of Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), Florida.

Wage Board Favored.

By this Pepper meant that the Southerners, while agreeing to the 25-cents-per-hour rock-bottom minimum wage, and to rigid wage schedules immediately above that, do not want the final objective of the law—40 cents per hour—to become the statutory wage in any specified number of years.

The three Southern conferees, Pepper, Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, and Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, all Democrats, hold that after the 30-cent minimum has been reached, a board for each industry in the country should determine minimum wages for the industries, subject to Labor Department approval.

They whole-heartedly oppose all the proposals which seek to fix a specified number of years after which the 40-cent objective becomes the fiat final law.

The Southerners set themselves for this fight after Pepper and Ellender had met for an hour with Senators Connally, of Texas; Smith, of South Carolina; Russell, of Georgia; Byrnes, of South Carolina; Andrews, of Florida, and Bankhead, of Alabama.

South Faces Defeat.

Their chances of success in even this effort seemed slim. Today Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, will amend his "five year plan" to an "eight-year plan" after which 40 cents an hour will become the fixed national minimum wage.

Walsh had proposed that from the committee-approved rock-bottom base of 25 cents per hour minimum wages would be stepped up three cents per hour per year for five years, reaching 40 cents at that time. This is merely a delayed modification of the House version of the bill, rigidly fixing in the law the wage.

His amendment today on which he will demand an immediate vote, will "merely prolong the agony"

$3,000,000 Annual Subsidy Granted To Dollar Lines

The Maritime Commission approved yesterday a five-year operating subsidy contract granting approximately $3,000,000 a year to the Dollar Steamship Lines, Inc., Ltd., of San Francisco.

Chairman Emory S. Land said the commission also had agreed to advance the company $1,500,000 for reconditioning and repairing the 13 vessels covered by the contract.

The commission assented to a rearrangement of the company's present $7,474,193 indebtedness to the commission, to enable the company to obtain a $2,000,000 loan for working capital from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The RFC,

Sen. Gillette Relaxes With Son

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The Iowa election and all its political angles apparently worried Senator Guy Gillette, candidate for renomination, little as he played with his son, Mark. Gillette's opponent in yesterday's election was Representative Otha Wearin.

Results in Iowa Held Setback To 'Purge' Tactics of New Deal

Defeat of Wearin, 'Adopted' by Administration, Heartens Senate's 'Marked Men' Who, Like Gillette, Failed to Vote 'Right.'

The New Deal and Washington's semiofficial "elimination committee" apparently received a set-back yesterday in Iowa's primaries—Midwestern farm testing ground for a threatened party purge of Democratic Independents.

Assuming that the steady trend throughout the early vote counting is maintained to the end, the following is true:

Defeat of Representative Otha D. Wearin, New Dealer by adoption, in his fight for the senatorial toga of Guy M. Gillette, who is "no rubber stamp," brought heart to the marked men of the Senate, of whom Gillette was regarded as No. 1.

The result could only be regarded as a farm rebuff to the Administration. Washington officials had deliberately injected the New Deal as an issue, although the voting records of the candidates themselves were strikingly similar.

Wearin, House "hog-calling" champion and advocate of moving the Capitol to the Midwest, had the backing of Thomas Corcoran, New Deal legal adviser, and Works Progress Administrator Hopkins. James Roosevelt, the President's secretary-son, called him "my friend." Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, an Iowan, and James A. Farley had refused to take sides in the contest.

Voted Against Court Bill.

Gillette was regarded as informally aligned with the Democratic anti-Administration bloc, and had reserved the right to exercise his individual judgement on New Deal measures. Until submission of the court plan, Wearin had done the same thing. Gillette voted against the court bill. The bill did not come to a vote in the House, but Wearin favored it.

Wearin was "adopted" as an Administration favorite by Washington officials, and Gillette was marked for elimination, following Senator Claude Pepper's success in the Florida primaries. Pepper had the outspoken support of the President's son James.

Yesterday's returns were closely watched by nearly a dozen Senators fearing Administration opposition in their November race for re-election. In at least a half dozen contests, candidates running under a "100 per cent" New Deal label have entered against them.

Reports of a purge marking them all for political extinction have

Navy Gives Up Camp Springs Airport Fight

Vinson Swings to It; Will Ask to Move Radio Towers.

Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, yesterday announced the Navy Department has withdrawn its opposition to the Camp Springs airport bill and that he will support the measure when it is called up in the House this week.

Vinson, who previously had opposed construction of a national airport at Camp Springs, said that an amendment will be attached to the bill giving the Navy sufficient funds (about $40,000) to move its radio towers.

The House Military Affairs Committee, in reporting the bill last week, added an amendment to compensate the Bureau of Standards for radio equipment now located near Camp Springs.

Chairman May, of the Military Affairs Committee, will go before the House Rules Committee today to ask for a special rule on the bill. He appeared before the committee yesterday, but the hearing was postponed.

While withdrawal of Navy Department opposition to the Camp Springs airport bill enhances chances of its passage by the House, several members of the Rules Committee have indicated they are not in sympathy with the President's demand that the legislation be acted on at once.

Wearin Trails In Iowa Race; G.O.P. Trend To Dickinson

Effect of 33,500 WPA Workers Awaited in Election Returns.

Primary Watched As New Deal Test

Democratic Incumbent Tops Opponent in All But Home Area.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 6.—Representative Otha D. Wearin, who claimed Presidential support in his quest of the Iowa Democratic senatorial nomination, trailed Senator Guy M. Gillette tonight as returns mounted from the State's 2,447 precincts.

Former Senator L. J. Dickinson, attempting a comeback after his defeat two years ago, was adding to his lead over Representative Lloyd Thurston for the Republican senatorial nomination.

Returns from 835 of the 2,447 precincts gave Gillette about as many votes as all four of his opponents combined. The count was:

Byerhoff	2,294
Gillette	25,057
Meyers	5,715
Richardson	3,414
Wearin	14,356
For Republican Senator.
Dickinson	47,116
Thurston	36,515

[In 1936 Iowa Democrats polled their record primary vote, a total of 141,000 senatorial ballots, as compared to 260,000 in the Republican primary. In the general election, however, Herring, Democrat, was elected to the Senate with 539,555 votes to 503,635 for Dickinson, Republican.—Editor's Note.]

Gillette sought renomination for the Senate on a platform of loyalty to President Roosevelt but said he would retain the right to judge each New Deal proposal on its individual merits if re-elected. He was one of the foes of the President's court reform plan but supported the reorganization bill and other Administration measures.

Dickinson ran far ahead of Presidential Candidate Alfred M. Landon in the 1936 elections even though he did lose to Senator Clyde L. Herring.

Gillette took the lead on the first count tonight and increased his margin on every succeeding tabulation. In earlier returns Gillette led in every section except Wearin's own Seventh Congressional District.

Westbrook Pegler once singled out Leonard Lyons as "one Broadway columnist who really gets around." Lyons is young enough to feel thrilled and excited by seeing famous people, of the New York theatrical world in particular, being with them, finding out things about them and reporting what he has learned to his readers. This eagerness at searching out information has brought him scoop after scoop—and makes his column, "The Post's New Yorker," on the theatrical page lively and entertaining.

Check-up Reveals 1,000 Dead On Oklahoma Pension Rolls

One thousand dead persons, out of 13,500 recipients checked to date, were on the rolls of those receiving public assistance funds in Oklahoma prior to March 2, the Social Security Board revealed yesterday.

Another 1,000 on the rolls had property in excess of State standards for public aid, and 500 more did not meet the age requirements. Of the 13,500 checked, 3,800, or more than one-fourth, have been dropped as ineligible.

The figures were made public by the board, which on March 2 stopped payment of Federal funds to Oklahoma. Yesterday it announced resticted resumption of the State's participation in the program of assistance to the aged, dependent children, and the blind, ruling, however, that the State must pay back all Federal cash distributed to ineligibles prior to March 1.

No estimate is available yet on the amount so disbursed, but the State welfare commission, at a meeting today, is expected to present figures that can serve as a basis for determining the amount that must be returned.

The board said it would deduct from future grants to the State the amount found to have gone to ineligibles, and would restrict future grants to such cases as have been

Hull Studying Plan for Spain Bomb Inquiry

Britain Asked for Details of Proposed International Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday he was examining every phase of the British proposal that the United States join in an international investigation of aerial bombings in Spain.

The proposal was communicated to the State Department by British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay, in an interview with Undersecretary Sumner Welles.

Lindsay suggested that this Government agree to be represented on an international investigating committee.

After studying the proposal, officials decided to ask Britain for further details.

U. S. Declined in Past.

Previous invitations to this Government to join with Britain and France in enterprises like the proposed inquiry have encountered the immediate reaction that this Government could not see fit to accept.

This immediate reaction is lacking in the present instance. Nevertheless the feeling prevails that the Administration does not desire to intervene so directly in European affairs.

Many diplomatic experts believe the most this Government might be disposed to do would be to attach a military observer to the international commission after Great Britain had set it up.

The continued Japanese bombing of Canton, China, shared interest here with the British proposal.

There are 340 Americans listed in State Department records as living in the Canton consular area, which embraces a wide territory including Kwantung, Kwangsi and Kweichow, excepting Swatow. Approximately half this number live in Canton itself.

No word has been received by the department to indicate that any of these Americans has been killed or injured.

The department has asked both the loyalist and the insurgent governments in Spain for information concerning Barton Carter, Boston, Mass., American volunteer with the loyalist troops. Carter's father, Winthrop L. Carter, asked the department to help in tracing his son.

The British government told the department yesterday that four young Americans who fled from Spain as stowaways on a British ship would be sent back to the United States. The four, who had been fighting in the loyalist army, must first serve a 21-day sentence for stowing away.

The men are Addison Starr Keeler, Laguna Beach, Cal.; John Weiss, Columbia University student; Raymond E. Ticer, Alfalfa, Okla., and Peter Campo, of Connecticut.

Ethridge that governmental efforts to judge cultural standards for radio programs would be inconsistent with principles of democracy.

One of the proposed rules is that the commission would take into account "such cultural programs as may be required" in licensing new stations or increasing power authorizations.

Asserting that "it is a matter of common knowledge that the American system has produced the highest type and widest variety of programs in the world," Ethridge insisted that "capsule culture is incompatible with democracy."

"Germany is the perfect example of a country that has a fixed pattern of culture and it is the most eloquent testimony to the contention that a country cannot have rigid pattern without military enforcement," he said.

"Under the competition between networks and the individual stations themselves the quality of radio programs has been constantly improving and will continue to improve as talent in this country is developed and as broadcasters themselves learn the new uses of talent."

Ethridge also urged defeat of proposals for [illegible] of the six-month license [illegible] limits on absentee ownership of stations and restrictions on [illegible]ental broadcasting.

Representing the National Committee on Education by Radio, S. Howard Evans declared that there was a need for more cultural programs and that more of them should be required by the Commission.

Miller was named head of the broadcasters' organization last night following a dinner of the board of directors. As he submitted to a barrage of flashlights, one photographer's bulb exploded in his face.

"Payne must have sent that man!" someone shouted. (George Henry Payne, FCC member since 1934, has commonly been called "stormy petrel" of the commission.)

The new president of the N. B. A. achieved Nation-wide fame last year when, as Mayor of Louisville, he directed relief activities in the Kentucky city during and after the disastrous Ohio River flood. Radio was widely used in giving directions and in obtaining aid for the thousands in distress.

Born in Louisville in 1894, Miller is the son of Shackleford Miller, one-time chief justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals. Miller was graduated from Princeton and received an LL. B. from Harvard in 1920.

After practicing and teaching law in Louisville, he became dean of the University of Louisville Law School in 1930.

House Fight on Relief Increase Threatens to Prolong Session

Representatives Taylor, of Colorado; Cannon, Missouri; Boylan, New York; Ludlow, Indiana, and Snyder, Pennsylvania (Democrats), and Taber, New York; Bacon, New York, and Wigglesworth, Massachusetts (Republicans).

All except Cannon were said to be opposed to the Senate amendment adding $212,000,000 to the relief bill for farm parity payments. Another fight will come on Senate proposals to pay WPA workers at a rate not less than $40 a month—equivalent to the wage-hour bill 25-cent-an-hour floor.

All told, the Senate increased appropriations and authorizations in the $3,154,000,000 House bill to $3,722,000,000. Woodrum said no estimates were obtained from the Budget Bureau for about $388,000,000 of Senate increases. The House group was expected to interpose no serious objectoins to the $175,000,000 added to WPA appropriations in the Senate, or the $125,000,000 earmarked for direct relief.

But the House group was prepared for grim battle against the $212,000,000 parity price increase and other items.

Hearings Forecast.

"So far as I am concerned, if this amendment is to be seriously considered by the conferees then certainly we shall have to go into full hearings on the subject in order that we might have some idea of what it is all about," said Woodrum. "This will take time."

Woodrum said the farm payments were approved by the Senate "practically without any hearings" and over "the specific statement of the President when the agricultural bill was under consideration that if such payments were to be authorized, taxes must be levied to meet them."

The Virginian also complained that $100,000,000 provided in House and Seante bills for rural electrification was excessive, and the $1,000,000 for rural power administration was unneeded. Both House and Senate committees were overridden to provide the REA increases.

Scheduled report today of a $272,000,000 second deficiency bill forced postponement of the relief bill conference until Thursday. Conferees must remain on the House floor to manage the deficiency measure. Leaders plan to pass this bill tomorrow night and send it to the Senate, where any increase over House figures will precipitate further time-consuming controversy.

In the form it will be reported today, the deficiency bill actually will carry only about $25,000,000 in deficiencies. Major items will include about $95,000,000 for the Commodity Credit Corporation; $50,000,000 for refunds on illegally collected processing taxes; $40,000,000 for social security payments, and $35,000,000 for the Navy (including $9,500,000 for new ships and $15,000,000 for modernization).

"Toy Balloon" Dropped.

Dropped from the bill was $500,000 for an experimental Navy dirigible, which Republican members call "the toy balloon."

Investigation into "monopoly and the concentration of economic power in and financial control over production and distribution of goods and services" was authorized in the O'Mahoney resolution ordered reported yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee would investigate points outlined in the President's monopoly message of April 29, and report recommendations at the next session of Congress. Known as a "temporary National economic committee," the investigating group would comprise one representative each from Justice, Treasury and Commerce committees, heads of the Securities and Exchange commission and the Federal Trade Commission, three members of the House and three members of the Senate.

FTC Charges Farm Machine Sales Coercion

Reveals 8 Dominating Implement Firms in Congress Report.

By the Associated Press.

Congress received a report from the Federal Trade Commission yesterday declaring that certain manufacturers of farm implements had coerced dealers to sell the manufacturers' products exclusively.

This practice has had extensive adverse effects upon the interests of small manufacturers, retailers and farmers, the commission said.

Making a partial report on a study of the industry requested by Congress, the commission said eight large concerns dominated the manufacture of farm machines and implements.

Dominating Firms.

International Harvester Co., of Chicago; Deere & Co., of Moline, Ill.; J. I. Case Co., of Racine, Wis.; Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., of Milwaukee; Oliver Farm Equipment Co., of Chicago; Minneapolis-Moline Power Implement Co., of Minneapolis; Massey-Harris Co., of Racine; and B. F. Avery & Sons Co., of Louisville, Ky.

The report related that the industry had nearly always been concentrated, and said that International Harvester, the largest in the field, no longer was as dominant as it once was.

The commission said the large companies appeared willing to give dealer agencies to farmer co-operatives which did a retailing business on a basis similar to that of private dealers, but discouraged agencies for other co-operatives which acted as wholesale agencies.

Regarding prices, the commission said:

"The practices of following the leader in pricing activities, such as extensive exchanges of prices and specifications, and standardization of design and construction of implements, have been substituted for the older, cruder and more obviously illegal agreements by which manufacturers sought co-operatively to control or restrict competition and exchange prices prior to 1920."

The commission reported 1937 was was the most prosperous year since the World War for the major farm implement manufacturers.

Labor Board Sets 18 Elections for Screen Writers

The National Labor Relations Board acted yesterday to adjust the long-standing collective bargaining dispute between Hollywood screen writers and movie producers. It scheduled 18 secret elections within the next 25 days to determine whether writers employed by 18 film companies desire representation by Screen Writers Guild, Inc., by Screen Playwrights, Inc., or neither.

Companies whose screen writers will vote are Loew's Incorporated (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures), Selznick International Pictures, Inc., Walter Wanger Productions, Inc., Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Ltd., Republic Productions, Inc., Columbia Pictures Corporation of California, Ltd., Paramount Pictures, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Universal Pictures Co., Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Grand National Films, Inc., Trem Carr Pictures, Ltd., Major Pictures Corporation, Hal Roach Studios, Inc., B. P. Schulberg, Inc., Monogram Productions, Inc., and Darmour, Inc.

International Bank Sale To Mission Authorized

Sale of the International Bank Building, at Fourth and H streets northwest, to the Gospel Mission for $34,000 was authorized by the District Court yesterday. Frederick J. Young, receiver of the bank, which was not permitted to reopen after the March, 1933, banking holiday, obtained the sale order. Unless objections are filed by June 17, sale at that price will be ratified by the court.

completely reinvestigated since March 1, and for new cases for which eligibility has been established.

The Oklahoma commission is reinvestigating all public assistance cases in the State, but the survey, at the rate of 10,000 cases a month, will not be completed until about the end of December. The board said it was understood that the State will carry, out of its own funds, all cases while the reinvestigation is pending.

"The State must assume the entire expense," the board said, "for all cases in which, since the beginning of the Federal-State program, assistance has been given to persons who have been found ineligible. When the reinvestigation is completed, the Social Security Board will determine the total amount of money for which the State is accountable to the Federal Government.

"This will reach a substantial figure and it will be necessary for the State to make plans so that this adjustment can be effected without serious curtailment of assistance to eligible individuals."

In addition to outlining arrangements for future grants, the board approved a grant of $461,910.33 to match Oklahoma public assistance payments made on March 1 before the State was notified that the board had decided to withdraw Federal funds.

South's Fight Tightens Wage Bill Deadlock

Wage

as one Southerner put it, by graduating the wages thus: 25 cents per hour the first year, 27½ cents the second, 30 cents the third, and then up two cents per hour per year for five years to 40 cents. His bill allows for no flexibility, no sectional nor industrial differentials, and is favored not only by Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, but by Representative Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, House Labor Committee Chairman and House conferees head.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, Senate Labor Committee chairman and Senate conference head, put most of the varying proposals of yesterday into one after the morning sessions of the conferees, held in separate groups, had broken up after lengthy discussion.

Plan to Take Seven Years.

This symposium would begin with rigid minimums for three years, at the 25, 27½ and 30-cent levels. After that time the President would appoint for each industry an industrial board, composed of representatives of the industry's management, labor and of the general public. These boards would recommend to the Labor Secretary or to an administrator within the department wages suitable to the living conditions, average wages, etc., in the industry as a whole. The administrator could then temporarily suspend the set increases, which would be 3 cents the first three years and 1 cent the the third. But at the end of the (probably) seven years the 40-cent minimum would constitute the legally fixed hourly wage for all industries affecting interstate commerce.

It is the latter point to which the Southerners object, the final fixing of the 40-cent minimum. As Pepper said, "We want the upper end left open indefinitely."

Norton Proposal Similar.

Mrs. Norton has a very similar proposal, differing in that boards would be appointed only on petition of a given number of employers in an industry. Her proposal, which the House conferees approved by a 6-to-1 vote yesterday, would leave the "upper end open." (Representative Richard Welch (Republican), of California, was the lone negative vote.)

This vote put the House conferees, presumably pledged to the rigid House bill, in the odd position of being more inclined to a flexible measure than the Senate has thus far seemed.

One thing seemed definitely settled after yesterday's lengthy wrangling—that the Senate bill's suggestion that a new Government agency, a fair labor standards board, be created to administer the law, has been almost entirely abandoned. Little hope was held out anywhere for this section. All proposals were based on Labor Department administration.

With the major hurdles still to be taken in showdown votes today, many knotty minor problems will remain to be solved. While not much difficulty is expected over the maximum-hours-per-workweek provisions, some debate may be required to settle the question of industries paying annual wages.

If the law fixes an absolute maximum of hours per year that may be worked by employes, such industries as Hormel & Co., of Minnesota, where wages-by-the-year are paid, would be penalized by the law, despite the fact that Senate hearings brought out that such seasonal industries where this system is used seldom average more than 40 hours per week for the year, while the wage average is $1,500. Overtime provisions of the present bills would penalize annual-wage industries, it is said.

D. C. Red Cross To Aid Veterans Under New Law

Also Will Help Soldiers' Widows and Orphans Obtain Benefits.

The Home Service Committee of the District Red Cross Chapter will give all possible assistance to veterans and their widows and orphans to obtain the benefits afforded by recent legislation, it was announced yesterday by Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the local chapter.

A law signed May 13 by President Roosevelt makes compensation for death not due to service available to widows and children of World War Veterans whose service-connected disability was only 10 per cent, Gen. Keefer pointed out. Death benefits formerly were paid only in cases where the veteran was 30 per cent disabled, or, if there were children in the family, 20 per cent.

Another bill, which became law May 24, provides a monthly pension of $60 to soldiers, sailors and nurses, now having reached the age of 65, who served at least 90 days in the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection or China Relief Expedition.

The bill also applies to those who served less than 90 days and were discharged for disability incurred in service, Gen. Keefer explained. Pensions for veterans requiring regular medical attendance are increased from $72 to $100 monthly.

Emphasizing that all persons eligible for these increases must apply for them, Gen. Keefer stated that the new rates will take effect from the date on which application is made.

Free Gardens Provision 300 Colored Homes

School Principal Sponsors Subsistence Plots on First Street.

Spread over a sunny slope in Southeast Washington these days is a scene that might have been taken from the plantation era of the Old South. Row after row of industrious colored folk bend over their rakes and hoes, looking as though they might break into "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," at any moment.

Unlike the toilers of plantation days, these gardeners are producing vegetables which will fill their own larders. Through the "subsistence garden" program of the Council of Social Agencies, they are given the soil to till and the tools to do it with. Their responsibility is to make the garden grow and to carry home the fruits of their industry come harvest time.

Some 300 families, all on relief, are engaged in the project. To be eligible for a garden a family must have at least five members. One man raises enough on his tiny plot to feed his wife and their 13 children.

Supervised War Gardens.

A veteran of the project is Herndon B. Jones, principal of Smallwood School and sponsor of the garden tract on First street, between R and T streets southwest.

He has organized and supervised the First street garden since 1933, he said yesterday. Even then he was no beginner, for during the war years he supervised Washington's war-time gardens. "This one is small compared to those," he added.

"The Council of Social Agencies arranges for the loan of the land from private individuals, the plowing of the land, the seeds and the selection of applicants. Then the people are turned over to me. In April I held a meeting at the school and gave complete instructions for the preparation of the gardens."

Plots 50 Feet Square.

Each plot, measuring about 50 feet square, is marked with a sign giving the gardener's name and address. Further identification is a number marked on the sign which corresponds with a card given the gardener, Jones explained. The card comes in handy when a worker is suspected of picking vegetables from another's garden.

Jones derives infinite satisfaction from his volunteer work. Although he has an assistant to check on the progress of the gardens, he himself frequently visits the tract in the evening and on Sunday, to chat with the workers and give them encouragement.

"The great thing about it is that these people otherwise would go hungry," he declared. "As it is, they will have food—and good, fresh food—not only all summer but through the winter months. Many of our people are still eating what they grew last summer."

Co-operation Another Aim.

The small plots are amazingly productive. Last year he saw a man pushing home a large cart loaded with three burlap bags of sweet potatoes. Other foods grown are white potatoes, corn, beans, peas, carrots, Swiss chard, cabbages, tomatoes, okra and radishes—but no watermelons!

"Just as important as the food, though, is the lesson in co-operative living we try to teach them. Coming from different communities, each with a different temperament, they must learn to work together," he believes.

Evidence that his teaching is effective is the tale of a woman who became ill just after starting her garden and spent the whole summer in a hospital. When she returned to the tract she found her plot was as well kept and as laden with produce as those of her helpful neighbors.

Setback Is Seen For New Deal in Iowa Primary

Reaction

been widely current and were recently aired in Senate debate on the spending-lending bill. Using Hopkins' indorsement of Wearin as a springboard, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, led a bitter attack on "politics in relief", and use of official influence and relief funds to defeat men who have not voted "right."

Defeat of Wearin was the second primary thrashing given Administration favorites in recent weeks. Postmaster General James A. Farley had indorsed Thomas Kennedy, unsuccessful C. I. O. candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. But in that primary, Farley had picked one winner—Gov. Earle, Pennsylvania's Democratic nominee for the Senate.

Governor Backed Gillette.

Gillette, tall, white-haired, handsome, had the support of Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel, of Iowa; his colleague, Senator Clyde L. Herring, and the State organization which entered the dispute only after Washington officials emphatically took sides for Wearin. Defending his record, he told Iowa voters that his court plan vote brought down upon him a "pack of political wolves from all over the United States." He asserted he had not and would not be "a rubber stamp member of the Congress."

Wearin, diminutive and so undistinguished in appearance that doorkeepers once denied him admission to the House floor, had made full use of the Hopkins indorsement and the telegram by James Roosevelt calling him "my friend." He had proclaimed himself as a "100 per cent New Dealer," and pictures of himself and the President's son had been distributed through the State.

Rode In On Landslide.

Both Gillette and Wearin rode into Congress on the crest of the 1932 Roosevelt landslide. For four years they served together in the House, before Gillette was elected to the Senate in 1936. In the House they both voted against NRA, AAA and the Bankhead cotton control act.

In 1934, Wearin voted to override President Roosevelt's veto of a bill repealing portions of the economy bill, and Gillette did not vote. Gillette voted for the Roosevelt "share the wealth" tax bill and Wearin voted against it. On important roll calls in the House, Gillette voted with the Administration 13 times, and Wearin 14 times. Wearin voted five times against the Administration, and Gillette 4 times.

But when Gillette went to the Senate, he reserved the right to use his individual judgment on each measure. He voted against the Senate wage-hour bill. But he voted for the reorganization bill, after casting futile votes for modifying amendments sponsored by Senators Wheeler, Byrd and other opponents of the measure. Wearin supported the wage-hour bill (the latter not being much of a vote lure in a fram State). Yet Wearin voted to override the President's veto of the farm interest-rate bill and opposed an income tax for members of Congress.

Thus, except for Gillette's hostile court plan and wage-hour votes, there was little to choose from as an Administration issue until Wearin, already in the race on his own, was "adopted" as a New Deal standard bearer. And in the case of Gillette's wage bill vote, the same Senate measure was opposed by the American Federation of Labor. Only two days ago, President Green, of the A. F. of L., wired his indorsement of Gillette to Iowa.

Of interest to Washingtonians, Wearin three years ago made a satiric attack in Washington taxpayers, who he said fail to realize the exclusive advantages they enjoy here, and introduced a bill to move the National Capital to the Middle West.

Frequent participant in Congressional hog-calling contests, and a winner of some, Wearin has divided his interests between farming, politics and art, having studied the latter abroad. Washington's social life he doesn't take seriously, and he has been known to attend the most formal receptions in a business suit and his customary red necktie.

Paint-Remover No Beverage, No Matter How You Treat It

Strain It or Burn It, Recipe Directs; Neither Works; Hardware Dealer Held for Grand Jury for Selling Liquid With Advice on Uses.

Paint remover is no substitute for brandy, even the day before payday, it was learned definitely yesterday.

You can take paint remover and pour it through bread to remove the impurities. Or you can ignite the liquid, and let it burn until there is no more blue flame, to make it fit for drinking.

One method yields what you started with, and the other yields nothing at all.

These facts were determined by experiment, following arrest yesterday of a Washington hardware dealer for violation of the liquor tax regulations under the repeal act.

The dealer was ordered held for grand jury action by U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, and released under $3,000 bond. He was arrested by agents of the Alcohol Tax Unit, at his store.

It's Lamp Fuel, Too.

According to testimony given Commissioner Turnage, the Treasury agents saw the dealer make several sales of a commercial solvent, used as paint remover, lacquer thinner, or fuel for lamps. The agents reported he gave his customers directions for converting the solvent to a fourth use—either straight or mixed with ginger ale.

The dealer, according to the agents, advised burning out the impurities, pouring the "liquor" in a flat pan and letting it burn until the flame disappeared.

He also suggested, the agents reported, filtering the liquid through a loaf of bread.

Because Commissioner Turnage said the dealer was the first arrested in the District since repeal for selling "smoke," and because a new recipe is worth learning, the recipe was tested in the photographic department of The Post.

First from the store came a small can of red paint, a half-pint of pain-remover and a warning not to drink it.

Bread Harder to Find.

A greater problem was finding a loaf of bread. Grocery stores in Northwest Washington have sliced bread, but few whole loaves. However, in a delicatessen near Fourteenth and L streets northwest, was found one unsliced loaf of rye bread.

With the help of the photographic staff, the directions for treating paint remover were followed. Into a small pan went several ounces of the fluid. The surface was ignited, and the material burned with a bright, blue and yellow flame. A few minutes later the flame went out, the pan was examined closely, and found to be empty.

For the next experiment two pans were used. Paint remover filtered through several inches of rye bread. The filtrate looked, smelled, and burned the same as the original liquid.

The bread also burned, in the second pan, with a pleasant odor like fresh toast, into a mass of black material that looked like steel wool.

However, as paint remover, the solvent worked effectively. After a bath of several hours in the liquid, shiny block paint peeled off a pencil like adhesive plaster. An overcoating of red paint came off with the black.

Further experiments were ended because the photographic staff ate the remainder of the rye bread. They also kept the remainder of the paint remover for possible future experiments.

They plan to wait for a better recipe.

nounced he would have voted for Wearin "if I lived in Iowa."

Senatorial criticism of "playing politics with relief" caused observers to watch closely today for specific election trends attributable to the 33,500 WPA workers on the rolls in this State.

The Hopkins indorsement also had its repercussions in Iowa. Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel wired the WPA official his "resentment" at the latter's "interference" in the Iowa race. Iowa Treasurer Leo J. Wegman, however, a Wearin campaign aide, followed Kraschel's statement with a telegram of commendation to Hopkins for his Wearin stand.

Sporadic showers over Iowa today added a weather complication to the Gillette-Wearin contest. The rain, however, was not heavy enough to hamper movement to the polls of farmers living on the State's 70,000 miles of dirt roads.

An afternoon's survey disclosed light voting except in cities with sharp local battles.

Gillette was elected two years ago to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Louis J. Murphy.

Gov. Winship arrived here yesterday and will go to New York to discuss plans for the forthcoming Puerto Rican tourist season. Yesterday he conferred with Congressional leaders and territories officials.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal yesterday recommended appointment of Glenn Simmon, special assistant, as a $4,600 assistant corporation counsel to succeed Jo V. Morgan, recently named the one-man Board of Tax Appeals.

A former football player at Southern Methodist University and Oklahoma A. & M., the 35-year-old assistant graduated from Oklahoma in 1927. He was appointed to teach commercial subjects at the old Business High School, and after two years of teaching and study at George Washington University law school, Simmon worked in the investment business here. He obtained his law degree at George Washington University in 1934 and was admitted to the bar that fall.

He entered the Government service, working with the General Accounting Office and the Textile Labor Relations Board. In September, 1936, Simmon was appointed assistant corporation counsel at the Police Court and last July came to Seal's offices.

During his work at George Washington University, Simmon studied taxation. He edited the Oklahoma A. & M. yearbook, the Redskin, and is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. Single, he makes his home at 1808 I street northwest.

7,000 Here Seek 700 Jobs in WPA

Ten new case workers were added to the local WPA staff to investigate more than 7,000 persons seeking 700 relief jobs, Otto Cass, deputy administrator said yesterday. During the past week 1,073 persons were investigated, 449 were rejected, 419 were certified eligible for WPA jobs and action was delayed in 165 cases. In addition 938 new persons were registered last week, Cass said.

Hague Leads 75,000 In Parade to Show Anti-Radical Stand

Jersey City, N. J., June 6 (U.P.).—An "Americanization" parade, led by Mayor Frank Hague, who waved a small American flag and bowed to the crowds, marched through Jersey City tonight as a demonstration of the city's stand against communism.

Police estimated between 75,000 and 100,000 were in the parade. There was no disorder and few boos came from the crowd.

The parade was arranged in appreciation of the mayor's stand against Communists and other so-called radicals. Hague has been accused by Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, and Socialist Norman Thomas of curbing civil liberties in Jersey City.

Although Fritz Kuhn, leader of the Nazis in America, had said that 2,000 Storm Troopers would march, none paraded.

Accused of Betting Against Nats, Fan Is Loser in Court

The fourth inning of Saturday's baseball game was as unlucky for Myron Miller, 58, of Long Beach, Calif., as it was for the Nationals.

As the Cleveland team piled up eight runs Miller was taken into custody on the stadium grounds by Policeman Julian J. Antoine, who allegedly saw him and two others placing $1 bets on the outcome of the inning. "You won, but you lose this time," Officer Antoine told him.

Miller told Police Judge Casey yesterday of being approached by a stranger and asked to place a bet. He denied doing so, however.

Judge Casey ordered him to pay $10 or serve a 10-day jail term.

Franklin Gray, 29, of Arlington, Va., the second participant in the alleged bet, will appear in court Thursday. The third man was not found.

Nazi Minority Vs. Reich Trade Vexes Hungary

New Prime Minister Faces Ticklish Task in Curb on 'Extremists.'

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, June 6.—Bela Imredy, new Hungarian prime minister, is confronted, it was learned today, with one of the most ticklish tasks—suppression of political extremists, including pro-German Nazis, without stepping on Germany's toes.

Germany is Hungary's best customer and her most powerful friend in the matter of territorial "justice" which Hungarians have demanded ever since 1919, when the Treaty of Trianon gave huge slices of the pre-war Hungary to her neighbors.

Imredy Acts Quickly.

Before Imredy formed his cabinet in mid-May there were at least three important Nazi movements, one officially represented in Parliament, and at least eight others which people talked about, in addition to some 50 Nazi groups important enough to be listed by students of politics.

Some of these were pro-German, and others anti-German, still others merely violently anti-Semitic.

Within two hours after taking office, Imredy declared he would take determined action against all organizations aimed at forcible overthrow of the government.

Linked with the problem of naziism, is the ever increasing demand of peasants for land. With a population of less than 9,000,000, Hungary has 1,000,000 landless peasants—a fact well known to Nazi organizers.

Land Reform Pledged.

Imredy has promised land reform, creation of small homesteads something like the "erbhoefe" or herditary farms in Germany. If Imredy can put the plan through without too much opposition from big landholders he will have scored heavily with a section of the populace lately susceptible to Nazi agiation.

The new prime minister also has announced plans for a compulsory labor service and a sort of "strength through joy movement," both coordinated in the philosophy of Christian national social justice.

It is a self-help program throughout with no hint of reliance on foreign assistance.

be a range of mountains between the Lunghai line and Hankow.

It was admitted the capture of Kaifeng, which was completed by the Japanese yesterday, made the eastern line untenable.

It was reported the Yellow River broke through a dyke near Lanfeng and drowned some Japanese troops.

Some foreign military observers believed the Japanese would occupy Hankow—traditional military heart of China—within a month and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his associates would flee southward, eventually establishing a new base in Yunnanfu, capital of Yunnan Province.

There was no indication the collapse of the eastern Lunghai line, which will give the Japanese full control of another vital Chinese railway system, would cause the Chinese to plead for peace.

The plans for abandoning the Eastern line include surrender of Chengchow, where the north-south Peiping-Hankow Railway crosses the east-west Lunghai tracks, the Chinese war office said, explaining the flat plains of Honan offer a perfect terrain for the mechanized Japanese armies.

"We cannot oppose the Japanese successfully on the Honan Plain," the statement said. "We will not fight them any place where the topography is advantageous to them but we will fight again after we have enticed the enemy into rugged regions where conditions are not suitable for their special equipment.

Save "Decisive Blow."

"We do not mind the gain or loss of single cities and towns. Our tactics now are to exhaust the enemy and to save our decisive blows for times and places which will be the most effective."

A Japanese army spokesman here said a unit commanded by Col. Tayama was the first to enter Kaifeng. These infantrymen fought their way across a moat, scaled the city walls, and then fought through the streets and westward along a muddy highway leading to Chenchow.

Other developments:

A spokesman for the Chinese air force in Hankow said there was no fear of Japanese raids on the capital similar to those on Canton which has been bombed almost daily by Japanese naval planes for a week with huge casualties among the civilian population.

He said the air force is not sending planes to defend Canton, but is keeping its whole strength for the Hankow area.

Pensive at Trial of $75,000 Suit

With this pensive expression, Frances Farmer, screen star, heard Oscar Serlin, former movie talent scout, testify in New York Supreme Court yesterday that only two years ago she was just a college girl who had won a magazine subscription contest. That, he said, was her entering wedge to fame. Serlin testified in Shepard Traube's suit for $75,000 he claims is due him from Miss Farmer for acting as her manager.

city since the current series of raids began May 28.

More than 100 bombs fell on the metropolis as the warplanes swept over literally in droves in one attack at 8:30 a. m. and another two hours later.

One side of the French-owned Doumer Hospital on the river front was blown out. A French military surgeon was wounded slightly, two Chinese patients were killed and seven injured. The hospital was struck as the raiders attempted to bomb the Pearl River Bridge. X-ray equipment and operating rooms were destroyed.

French Colonial infantrymen from Shameen Island, where there are British and French concessions, were rushed to the scene to guard the property.

Charles Arsene Henry, French Ambassador to Tokyo, protested to the Japanese government against the bombing. He told Japan continued bombings, with the consequent heavy toll of civilian lives, threatened to arouse strong anti-Japanese sentiment in France.

Henry received as a reply the Japanese declaration that Canton was a fortified base for Chinese military operations.

A. P. Blunt, the British Consul General, telephoned a protest to the Japanese consul in Hongong against the flight of the warplanes over the international quarter.

The Japanese consul said he would relay the protest to Tokyo and was reported to have added: "I for one am most sorry that our people flew over Shameen. They will have to be more careful in the future."

Government buildings, railway stations, electric power plants and the Pearl River bridge apparently were the principal objectives of the fliers.

The Japanese have been attempting since last year to destroy the transportation facilities and end Canton's importance as the gateway for war supplies from abroad.

Casualties were especially heavy along the waterfront where bombs struck amid tightly-packed houseboats.

A. T. Hull, of Hampton, Va., a newsreel cameraman, was stunned while filming rescue work. Edward H. Lockwood, of Indiana, Y. M. C. A. secretary, narrowly escaped injury.

Bombs plunged to the earth within 200 yards of the French Cathedral, killing Red Cross workers. Forty-five bodies were laid in the road outside the Chinese Red Cross unit building next to the French hospital.

A fire caused by a short circuit raged for four hours in a power plant, disrupting the city's current.

(Hongkong reported refugees continued to stream in there. The Right Rev. Ronald O. Hall, Anglican Bishop of Victoria, Hongkong, asked Sir Geoffry Northcote, the governor, to establish a refugee camp, but the request was refused.

like the Sudeten Germans exploiting our demand as an indication that the people of Czechoslovakia want to break up the republic. Our trip was planned long before any such trouble appeared on the horizon."

After Hodza's speech, the Chicago leader addressed the crowds swarming the main square of this capital of Slovakia.

"We bring you the greetings of the Slovaks in America who, with the welfare of the Czechoslovak Republic at heart, pray for your independence and wish to help you achieve it.

"We still hope you can protect the republic and remain good Slovaks within its confines."

Hodza and Hletko spoke from the same balcony where Father Hlinka yesterday demanded autonomy for Slovakia and its 3,329,793 people and brought about a resurgence of the Slovak minority fight.

Hodza, answering the Slovak People's Party leader, asked the crowds today whether the republic is capable of maintaining its independence.

"We are, we are," his listeners shouted.

"We welcome to our midst not only the members of the Agrarian Party (Hodza's Party) but also all who are for the unity of our nation. Long live Slovak unity," said Hodza.

In addition to the Agrarians the demonstration included the Social Democrats and the National Socialists (President Eduard Benes' Party), the Communists and Jewish Party.

Freud Starts Life Anew as Exile in England, Poor, Ill

London, June 6 (AP).—His fortune gone and his health fragile, 82-year-old Dr. Sigmund Freud began a new life in England today.

He was the first prominent Jew allowed to leave Austria since the creation of the greater Germany March 13.

"Everything we owned has been taken away, but we don't feel ruined," his daughter, Anna, said cheerily.

Anna and his wife accompanied the world-renowned "father of psychoanalysis" to England from Vienna. His son, Ernst, a London architect, accompanied them on the overnight ferry-train from Paris.

Dr. Freud was placed under a physician's care.

Spanish Bomb Inquiry Agreed to 'in Principle'

Stockholm, June 6 (AP).—Sweden tonight accepted in principle a British invitation suggesting an international commission to determine whether Spanish bombings that have killed hundreds of civilians were directed toward military objectives.

near the French frontier, the Associated Press said.

[The statement was released after reports were received of the bombing of French territory yesterday by planes of unknown nationality which flew across the border from Spain.

["Not a single nationalist (insurgent) plane has flown nearer than 100 kilometers (62½ miles) from the Spanish-French frontier," the statement said. It added all insurgent air activity had been confined to the south Barcelona parallel—Editor's note.]

After meeting Prefect Maurice Gammet, of Orgeix, Deputy Alexandre Rauzy, Senator Paul Laffont and General Menard, who commands the Ariege district, the premier drove to Orgeix from Toulouse and carefully inspected the bombed area.

Reassures Mayor.

He assured the mayor of Orgeix "all measures have been taken to prevent a recurrence" of the bombings.

Daladier remained overnight at Foix and will return to Paris late today.

Both French and Spanish loyalist anti-aircraft guns fired on the nine planes which crossed the border today.

A communique revealed the anti-aircraft guns spiking the French side of the border near the village of Palu first fired three blanks and then three shells, apparently in an actual attempt to bring down the Spanish planes.

Today's violation of the frontier by the nine planes flying in perfect "V" formation, crossing the Pyrenees north of the Spanish loyalist stronghold of Puigcerda, was the second within 28 hours in the same vicinity.

Bombs Kill 3 Britons.

By the United Press.

Alicante, Spain, June 6.—Five insurgent planes today bombed and set fire to the 5,775-ton British freighter Saint Winifred, killing three British sailors and two Spanish stevedores, in raids on Alicante and Valencia, Segorbe, and coastal villages, that left 85 civilian dead.

The dead in Alicante, including those on the British ship, numbered 37 and 118 wounded, including 12 women and two children. An observer of the London non-intervention committee aboard the Saint Winifred was still unconscious tonight, hours after the bombing of the ship.

Twelve persons were killed and 29 wounded in a raid on Segorbe, north of Valencia and inland from Castellon de la Plana. Five were killed at Vallde Uxo and two wounded, while casualties in a raid on Pueblo de Alcudia and small coastal villages brought the total of dead to an estimated 85.

The insurgent air force followed up the Alicante and Valencia raids with an 8-minute bombardment of Barcelona late tonight. Antiaircraft guns battled away at the raiders. Searchlights pierced a cloudless sky.

The Saint Winifred, damaged in an insurgent air raid on Alicante two weeks ago that took a heavy toll of dead and wounded, was the fourth British ship attacked by Generalissimo Francisco Franco's air fleet since May 24.

The other three British ships—the Thorpehall, Penthames and Greatend—were sunk by air bombs.

The Spanish (Loyalist) Press Agency listed 19 civilian dead, including women and children, and 57 wounded in the Alicante raid. The listing did not include the members of the Saint Winifred's crew.

At Valencia, former provisional capital of loyalist Spain, 73 miles northward along the coast, seven persons were killed. The Valencia victims were members of one family, four adults and three children.

(Dispatches from London said that the British government, taking a grave view of repeated attacks on British shipping, contemplated seeking neutral zones for British ships in Spanish waters. If the attacks persisted after establishment of such zones, it was said, Britain might embark on "reprisals" by seizing insurgent ships to offset the loss of British vessels).

Oslo Favors Bomb Inquiry.

Oslo, June 6 (AP).—Norway's government circles today were favorably disposed toward Britain's plan for an international inquiry into air raids on Spanish cities. It was expected the cabinet would act on the proposal this week.

Lloyd George Scoffs At British on Spain

Stafford, England, June 6 (AP).—David Lloyd George declared tonight Britain's "twittering little protests like a frightened bird" to the Spanish insurgents were becoming a world joke.

The former prime minister, a Liberal, made his address during a by-election rally in which he spoke for the Labor Party candidate.

He shook his fist angrily as he accused the government of "crawling before dictators."

Italy, Germany "and Americans, too," he said, laughed every time Britain dispatched another protest.

Morley Stresses Power of 'Able' Public Opinion

Tells Duke Graduates the Extremists Cancel Out Each Other.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Durham, N. C., June 6.—Development of a public opinion able to cope intelligently with problems of civilization is a major factor in "the continuation of our system of government," Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, told the Duke University graduating class today.

Speaking to more than 800 students who received 15 classes of degrees at the school's centennial commencement, Morley said, "It is evident that the press has a very responsible role, and that in its efforts to fill the role it should have the active interest of all college graduates."

"We get along as well as we do in a democracy because under that system of government, and only under that system of government, extreme opinions tend to cancel each other out," he said. "This leaves the balance of power with the intelligent, open-minded, middle-of-the-road citizens. It is their judgment, ready to be thrown into either scale as a result of thoughtful consideration, which constitutes the most important and the most effective part of public opinion."

Seven honorary degrees were conferred upon notables in the fields of religion, science, literature and government. They were: The Rev. James Braxton Craven, Greensboro, N. C.; the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, New York, doctors of divinity; Charles H. Herty, Savannah, Ga., doctor of science; Ray Stannard Baker ("David Grayson"), Amherst, Mass., and Ellen Glasgow, Richmond, Va., doctors of literature; Lewis Hill Weed, Baltimore, and Gov. Clyde R. Hoey, of North Carolina, doctors of law.

Psychiatrists Reveal Reason For Attraction of Like Sexes

Pituitary Gland at Base of Brain Fails to Regulate Male and Female Hormones, Scientific Group Is Informed.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 6.—Discovery of the reason why many persons, estimated at 3 per cent of the total population, are too greatly attracted by the same sex, was reported to the American Psychiatric Association here today.

It is due to the pituitary gland, at the base of the brain, getting out of order in its work of regulating the amount of sex hormones produced. No class is immune to this trouble.

Both sexes always have a small percentage of these chemical regulators of the opposite sex. In case of the 3 per cent of the population the pituitary gland gets the hormone mixture scrambled. It gives a man, for example, a preponderance of feminine hormones.

In some cases, Dr. Clifford A. Wright, of Los Angeles, said, progress had been made toward correcting the affliction by use of one of the hormones normally produced by the pituitary gland. This chemical was not itself a sex hormone. He said use of sex hormones themselves had little effect.

Correcting this affliction, Dr. Wright said, is important in prevention of sex crimes. He pointed out although major sex crimes are not usually committed by the persons with this hormone trouble, it is a factor in the legal situation.

A change in sentencing criminals was advocated by Frank M. Ogden, judge of the Superior Court at Oakland, Calif. The present system is fallacious, he said, because the sentence is imposed for the crimes committed. Instead, he said, the sentence should be applied according to the individual who committed the crime.

Dodging The Main Issue.

Both the House and Senate have passed bills amending the merchant marine act in accordance with recommendations of Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Maritime Commission. Unfortunately, however, both chambers rejected Mr. Kennedy's constructive proposals for dealing with the critical labor situation.

In a comprehensive and keenly analytical survey of the shipping industry, completed on the eve of his resignation from the chairmanship, Mr. Kennedy urged that maritime labor disputes should be handled by a mediation board as are disputes involving railway labor. Under this arrangement strikes would still be possible but a "cooling-off" period would be assured during which time efforts at adjustment could be made. He also recommended the establishment of a training system for young men entering the merchant marine under the supervision of the Coast Guard.

The measure reported out of conference last week makes no attempt to deal effectively with maritime labor problems. Following the lines of the Senate bill, it does, to be sure, provide for a three-member mediation board. But the board could not intervene in maritime disputes unless both sides requested its services. Most shipping experts are said to share Senator Burke's opinion that the new board will be worse than nothing at all.

The proposed training plan was thrown out altogether in conference, presumably because of vehement protests from C. I. O. spokesmen. The Senate bill had included a provision authorizing the Maritime Commission to establish a system of training and to call on other governmental agencies for such aid and facilities as it needed. This would have paved the way for utilizing the services of the Coast Guard. However, the conferees agreed merely to instruct the Maritime Commission to consult all interests, including labor, and to be prepared to recommend a training system next year.

It was no doubt only a coincidence that on the day the conference committee concluded its labors the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, called a one-day "sit-down" strike in the port of New York, tying up 13 passenger ships and 20 freighters. This demonstration, it appears, was the outcome of feuds between rival labor organizations with which the shipowners were not concerned.

When Mr. Kennedy was chairman of the Maritime Commission, he repeatedly emphasized the futility of trying to restore the prestige and strengthen the relative position of the American merchant marine unless steps are taken to correct the "disgraceful" labor situation. Vigorously and no less unequivocally, his successor, Admiral Emory S. Land, has echoed these views. In a recent address he said: "Until a reasonable degree of stability is attained in the ranks of labor, including the elimination of jurisdictional disputes and the re-establishment of labor efficiency on which the shipbuilder and the ship operator can reasonably estimate their costs, the program for the rehabilitation of the merchant marine remains only a pious hope."

Despite these authoritative and unprejudiced admonitions, Congress has refused to grapple with this major and pressing issue. The fact that this is an election year does not excuse this costly inaction.

The Cost Of Attaining Parity.

Before passing the relief bill the Senate accepted an amendment providing for price adjustment payments to producers of wheat, cotton, corn, rice and tobacco.

The aim is to bring returns received by farmers as nearly as possible up to 75 per cent of parity prices for the commodities in question. The amount appropriated—$212,000,000—is a mere bagatelle compared with the sum that would be needed to fulfill the hopes that were aroused by passage of the new farm act. That measure held out promises to farmers of parity prices for their products and parity incomes. That is, the objective was to raise farmer income to a point at which farmer purchasing power would equal that of the base period 1909-1914.

The utter impossibility of attempting to make good such promises is realized when one considers the present position. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports that the index of farm product prices is at the lowest level for May in four years, having declined nearly 30 per cent during the year. Especially significant from the viewpoint of those who aim at parity of farmer incomes is the fact that the ratio of prices received by farmers for their products to that paid by them has fallen to 74 per cent of the pre-war parity level.

It has been estimated that to make full parity payments on wheat and cotton alone this year would cost nearly $1,000,000,000. What it would cost to attain parity incomes for the farm population as a whole may be left to the imagination. It is anybody's guess. The wide fluctuations in prices of farm products testifies to the utter absurdity of legislating for restoration of vanished price relationships. Moreover, they would not assure ideal adjustments even assuming they could be maintained.

In voting for limited parity payments, therefore, the Senate is simply trying to add an erratic, unjustified subsidy to the great variety of loans and benefits already available to raise prices and subsidize farmers.

The Wage-Hour Dilemma.

Because of the rush for adjournment a welter of proposals is flooding into the conference room where representatives of the Senate and House are attempting to harmonize widely diverging wage-hour bills. Most of these plans are designed more to effect a politically feasible compromise than to provide the country with sound minimum wage legislation. The chances that a satisfactory bill will be worked out under these conditions are very meager.

With the controversy thus in its final stage, the Bureau of Labor Statistics has published some valuable information on wage and hour differentials which should have been available before any legislation was drawn. The bureau has found substantial gaps between the average annual wages paid in the North and South, and even more striking contrasts in the wages paid by various industries. These data should put an end to further consideration of an inflexible minimum wage to be applied to all parts of the country.

In 1935, the bureau found, the average annual wage in Northern industries studied was $1,074 compared with $809 for Southern industries included in the survey. Part of this difference, it points out, is due to the greater prevalence of low-wage industries in the South. A study of similar industries in both sections, however, showed that the hourly wage scale is lower in the South by 6.1 per cent in chemical production of rayon yarn, by 9.5 per cent in petroleum refining and by 36.7 per cent in the manufacture of ice.

Even more significant is the finding that average wages in major industries throughout the country range from 35 to 84 cents. The lowest figure (5 cents per hour below the minimum proposed in the Senate bill) was found to prevail in the manufacture of cigars, cotton yarn and thread, and rayon. And these are average, not minimum, wages. Application of a rigid minimum wage standard to these industries (even with the House bill step-up from 25 to 40 cents in three years) would doubtless result in widespread unemployment.

In these circumstances, minimum wage legislation without a large degree of flexibility appears to be utterly impracticable. Under the House bill the lowest paid worker in a Southern industry affecting commerce would earn $832 by 1941 if employed throughout the year for 40 hours per week. That would compare with $653 earned in 1933 by the average worker in Southern industries surveyed by the BLS and $809 in 1935. To decree such a wage scale in a period of depression would be a move toward greater instability instead of recovery.

If the conference committee attempts to escape this dilemma by turning to the Senate bill, however, it will meet the stern opposition of the American Federation of Labor. That organization has given warning that it will fight any wage-hour bill which does not establish "a universal floor for wages." It has good reason to fear the results of turning this complicated problem over to a Federal board when so little is known of minimum wages and so few standards for guidance of the proposed board have been worked out.

There appears to be only one satisfactory outcome of this tangled situation. Legislation should be postponed until Congress can take a fresh view of the subject with more information to keep it clear of economic, political, and constitutional pitfalls. An attempt to raise wages, even those in the lower brackets, would be most untimely at present anyway. The first consideration, so long as this depression lasts, should be to preserve existing jobs. Certainly no step that might increase unemployment should be taken.

If Congress has the courage to face the situation realistically it will drop the effort to make a satisfactory law out of two unsatisfactory bills and give industry a chance to reabsorb the unemployed without further impediments.

The "Cranes" Return.

An aerial display of distinctly Japanese flavor is the luck of motorists using the George Washington Memorial Highway these days. But, fortunately, no hospitals are in danger of bombing. It is only the egrets which have returned to their summer haunts along the Potomac. Great white, long-legged creatures, they might have flapped right off the silhouetting of a hand-painted silk screen.

But for organized bird-lovers, the American Egret might not be seen today in these parts or any other, for that matter. Because they bear half a hundred exquisitely flimy feathers during the breeding season, the birds were nearing extinction at the hands of the fashion trade when States in their Southeastern nesting area were at last induced to pass protective legislation. Later, the migratory bird treaty effected with Canada supplemented these humane efforts. Today it is illegal to wear an "aigrette" on a hat.

As a result, the egrets are coming back into their own. Every year they are returning to Washington a few days earlier. In time they may even resume their habit of nesting here, though they probably will not return to the lowlands near Arlington Cemetery which they formerly favored. Lack of swampland, not the poor landing facilities which frighten human fliers from that neighborhood, will lead them to new parts.

The section known as Dike Marsh, two miles or more below Hunting Creek, may well be one of their first alternatives. Once a Netherlandish sort of farmland which the river has now reclaimed, it is their ideal habitat. There they stalk about even now spearing their assorted diet of fish, frogs, bugs and moths with the yellow bills which distinguish them from the smaller Snowy Egret and the Little Blue Heron of the north. This property, now held by a private institution, should some day be brought under the supervision of the National Park Service wardens.

Czechs And Slovaks.

Of Czechoslovakia's 15,000,000 inhabitants, two-thirds belong to the two kindred peoples who give the Central European republic its name, the remaining 5,000,000 being divided among Germans (around 3,300,000), Magyars (700,000), Ruthenians (550,000) and Poles (82,000).

Between the Czechs and the Slovaks there are many more points of unity than there are points of difference. They have a common history and, except in minor details, a common language. Both were subject peoples of the Hapsburgs, the Czechs under Austrian and the Slovaks under Magyar rule. And except for the greater impact of the Hussite tradition on the Czechs, no deep religious barriers divide the two.

Nonetheless, the republic has long harbored a Slovak autonomist movement under the vigorous leadership of Father Hlinka. Although part of the ruling majority in Czechoslovakia, the followers of Hlinka have regarded themselves as a minority in the post-war State. They have insisted that in voicing their demands for autonomy they were merely asking for what had been promised in the famous Pittsburgh agreement. This pact, signed by representatives of Czech and Slovak groups in the United States, pledged the Czechoslovak government, when formed, to grant "cultural self-government" to the latter.

Early in the history of Czechoslovakia, however, it was decided that such a move would intensify rather than diminish the minor differences between Czechs and Slovaks and thus, by forcing the republic to transform itself along federal lines, weaken its capacity for self-defense.

At bottom the differences between the Czechs and Slovaks stem from the fact that Austrian rule was more enlightened than Magyar rule. The Czechs thus had greater opportunities—for cultural and political advancement. As a consequence the proportion of Czechs in the new government tended greatly to exceed that of Slovaks. Yet the present premier of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Hodza, is himself a Slovak.

It is significant in this connection that close on the heels of the autonomist demonstration organized by Father Hlinka at Bratislava Sunday, Dr. Hodza sped to that city and, in a fighting speech which was cheered by many thousands, denied the claims of Hlinka to speak in the name of all the Slovaks. While the Slovaks number close to 17 per cent of the total population, Father Hlinka's Slovak People's Party polled less than 7 per cent of the total vote cast in the election of 1935 for the lower chamber of Parliament.

Nevertheless, Father Hlinka's maneuver, coming at a time when the Prague government is under strong pressure from the German minority under Konrad Henlein, has very embarrassing possibilities for the republic. Whether so intended or not, it plays right into Hitler's hands. The great crowd, which gathered to hear Premier Hodza denounce Hlinka would indicate that many Slovaks realize this and are determined to oppose any weakening of the common Czech-Slovak front.

Regardless of how the class votes, if you would know which graduate will be most likely to succeed, find out which one goes to work immediately after graduation even if he has to take a job instead of accepting a position.

College Park Airport.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of June 3, indicates that The Post, like many an airport commission of recent years in Washington, is unaware of one simple and logical solution of Washington's rather disgusting airport problem.

The College Park site for the Capital's airport provides ample space to take care of needs for many years to come—with runways measuring 7,000, 6,500, 5,500 and 4,000 feet in length. College Park offers accessibility to both downtown Washington and Northwest Washington, whence come most of the air travelers, transportation facilities adjacent to the field, and concrete highways in readiness for instant use, as well pointed out in your news article.

Your discussion of Gravelly Point brings up the important question of its ultimate adequacy, and certain obstacles such as new buildings which will have to be removed. "A word from the President," according to your editorial, would put Army engineers on the job and result in quick completion of the field. Meanwhile, what? Will the President's dream of an accident come true?

The long runway at College Park could be paved and ready for use 60 days after acquisition of the land. The land is owned in small parcels, many of which have been sold for taxes. It has not been developed for business or residence. Acquisition of the land should not be any more difficult than in any other case, and perhaps it would be much simpler.

College Park is far away from the Navy's expensive radio establishment, and far away from the Bureau of Standards' equally important research station at Silver Hill.

It would be interesting to find out all the facts about this "oldest airport in the country," and why it has been persistently ignored by various commissions and committees considering the problem for the District.

We want to point out that our interest is only to see that the best site available is chosen. We have no options on real estate and stand to profit not a penny if College Park is selected. Our only requirement would be the comparable location of our present laboratory at the end of a runway so that we can continue our research and development of aeronautical radio aids, especially instrument landing.

'Dictator Business.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that they accuse Mr. Gillette, of Iowa, of not being "regular" because he opposed the court bill. Was the Administration regular when they indorsed Senator Norris instead of a Democrat? And they also indorsed Senator La Follette, who is certainly not a Democrat. Does an elected member or Senator have to vote just as the Administration says? If so, we might do away with Congress and just go to the 10-cent stores and get a rubber stamp. Some of us are tired of all this dictator business.

More On The Arms Embargo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the letters of "L. F. X. G." and Veneta White, published in your June 3 issue, both letters replying to a letter of Helen Silvermaster which appeared in The Post on May 27, under the heading of "The Embargo on Arms to Spain."

Both "L. F. X. G." and Veneta White criticize Miss Silvermaster's letter on the ground that the loyalists in Spain are Communists, and hence are atheistic and "God-haters" and undeserving of sympathy from Christian America.

I experience a feeling of embarrassment that there remain Americans who suffer from illusions aroused early in the Spanish conflict. In the early days of the uprising when issues were greatly confused, some of our papers printed articles that made the loyalists' cause appear in the light of an anti-Catholic campaign. Since then, however, dispatches from Spain appearing in such papers as The Post and the New York Times have belied any such misconceptions.

As for the charge that the loyalists are Communists, an examination of the facts reveals that this, also, is a misconception. To be sure, the Communists have a voice in the government, just as have the Socialists and other parties that would correspond to our liberal Democrats and liberal Republicans. After all, Communists are fighting to defend Spanish democracy and freedom from fascism, and it seems that if they can fight for democracy they should have a voice in it. One member of the 12-member cabinet in Spain is a Communist; and 16 members of the 473-member Cortes are Communists. The Communists must indeed be powerful if they can dictate to the country with such a small representation in the nation's government!

On the same basis, France has Communist representation in its government. There are Communist members in the British House of Commons. I have not heard the charge that the British and French governments are communistic, and that America should, therefore, break off relations with them. One cannot escape the apparent fact that Spain was singled out by the Fascist powers to be a victim of their aggression, and that they have deliberately raised the cry of communism in an effort to win sympathy for their own shameless invasion.

Veneta White believes that Miss Silvermaster's statement that 75 per cent of the American people favor the loyalist cause "savors of an old custom of the Communists to appear stronger than they really are." The implication of this belief is that The Post is an organ of Communist propaganda, since The Post featured a Gallup poll (Institute of Public Opinion) which reflected sympathy with the loyalist cause by 75 per cent of the American people.

WILLIAM ULLMAN.
Washington, June 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Miss Veneta White's letter to The Post, dated May 31, states that she does not agree with Miss Silvermaster's letter in The Post of May 27, with respect to the statement that 75 per cent of the people favor lifting the embargo on arms to Spain.

It may be enlightening to Miss White to know that the percentage stated is based on the Gallup poll, as of February 26, 1938, and it is believed by many who have followed the situation in Spain and the reaction in this country that if taken today this vote would now be around 85 per cent.

Miss White implies that the Spanish government is under an atheistic dictatorship, imposed on Christian people by force. Certainly Miss White ought to know that the only dictatorship that prevails in Spain today is that of Franco, and he is supported by two other dictators—Mussolini and Hitler.

R. FRANCIS TIPTON.
Washington, June 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is in response to those writers in your column who have urged the continuance of the embargo against loyalist Spain. It is difficult to conceive of people who profess to believe in democracy while advocating measures which are contrary to the enforcement of law, order, justice and plain humanitarian thoughts and action.

It is said that the loyalist government is supported by Communists. If we in the United States were confronted with the dangers of fascism would we refuse to accept the aid of others simply because the others did not agree with our political ideas?

The loyalists need ammunition and weapons to ward off fascism. We should lift the embargo and help fight and kill off this scourge of the earth. Or else it will spread and devour us, too.

Political Morals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The debate and vote of June 2 in the Senate, on an amendment to the spending-lending bill to bar relief officials and employes from political activities in conventions, primaries and elections, displayed the political morals of a large number of Senators for the whole country to see and condemn.

It appears from the press reports that the only argument against the defeated amendment was that those disbursing relief funds should be allowed to play politics, because State officials and employes and others paid out of Federal funds are free to do the same. Stripped down to realities, does this not mean that these Senators openly countenance the use of public funds for the purpose of winning elections?

The question is often asked: Can we make democracy work? If the vote in the Senate of June 2 is representative of the political morals of our people, we are unworthy of liberty and our democracy is already doomed. And sooner or later we will be forced to seek refuge from our own vices in a monstrous fascism.

No Ransom—No Kidnaping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Have we not had enough experience to learn the folly of tossing money out on the road before the return of kidnaped children or other human beings? Lindbergh, Levine, Cash, Ross—why? Because the kidnapers cannot keep children quiet while they are negotiating for the ransom, and in trying to do so they are choked to death.

Motto: Let the G-men loose at the first signal. No doubt in the Cash and similar cases the kidnapers are known to the victims and could easily be apprehended.

This is my second article on the vital question in which I cited the inadequacy of the Lindbergh law, and suggested a "No Ransom Law" until the victim is returned. I repeat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Born where the Congressional Library stands today, reared in the shade of the grand old Capitol Building and its lovely grounds, and a graduate of old Eastern High School, I have a sincere regard for that part of the city called "East from the Capitol."

I have one plea to make pertaining to its improvement. May the beautiful old elms of East Capitol street be spared! Whether it is when the fairy lace-work of their blossoms in early spring casts a network of dainty shade, when their heavy foliage of summer makes an inviting archway across the old street, or when in winter their naked branches stretch heavenward in artistic lines, they are beautiful.

May they be spared to grace East Capitol street in the future!

Washington is overrun with dogs, and they are becoming a nuisance. Nowhere do you see so many people out taking their dogs for a walk and leaving their nasty traces everywhere. It's disgusting.

The Post Impressionist

Sixty Years Ago.

DRIVING through Laurel the other day with my friend the Old Native I made the trite observation that the town must have changed since the Baltimore boulevard had developed to its present stage. I recalled the days of my childhood when we piled the family in the little Ford, linen dusters, veils and all, and thought we had no end of a long drive if we went to Laurel and back in the afternoon.

"Yes, it's changed since then," said the Old Native, "but it is even more of a change to look back to the Laurel of 60 years ago. Well I remember that summer day when our little amateur opera company came out from Washington to give a performance of "S. S. Pinafore." The company was gotten together by a man named Baker, I sang in the chorus with some companions but I forget the names of the leading singers. Mr. Baker hired a bus to bring us out. It was one of those open-air affairs with lateral seats. It took us all afternoon to drive out, we had dinner at the Laurel Hotel (yes, we just passed it, that little frame building at the traffic light crossroad). The road we came on was not the one eventually developed by the boulevard. It ran more to the east of that and came in near the station.

"After dinner we went over to the Laurel Opera House to give our performance. The old Opera House must have been taken down for I can't seem to locate it now—I don't even remember which street it was on. After the show we mounted our bus and drove back to Washington so it was early morning before we were home. That was a great lark for the young crowd in addition to the fun we had with our singing.

"Singing in operettas was my great hobby as a young man. We had no phonographs or radios to get our music but we had a lively time providing our own. That first company I was just telling you about that made the Laurel trip was quite unpretentious and short-lived. I remember our first show was given at Gonzaga Hall on I street, long since gone, but after the Laurel expedition we didn't try any more one-night stands and the organization faded out.

"The next group I was active in was much more ambitious. John Philip Sousa was a young man at that time. The tremendous vogue for Gilbert and Sullivan no doubt inspired him to have a try at light opera. He was extremely talented and ambitious and I believe it was his dream to make a name for himself as composer of light opera as well as marches and band music.

"A company of amateurs was formed known as the 'Washington Operatic Society' and in this group Sousa soon became a leading spirit. To be accepted as a member was quite a compliment, though glory was all we ever expected, there being no remuneration of any sort. Sousa held auditions to pick his company. As I only aspired to the chorus my audition was with two other singers, but Sousa could tell just how each voice was registering and I was happy to be selected.

"Sousa attracted the best Washington talent and his leading singers were people of note of that day. Never will I forget the singing and acting of Eva Mills, John Pugh and Ed Hay. From my place in the chorus I took great pride in their popularity. Our success here naturally led Sousa on to dream of bigger things. So our composer-director made an engagement for the 'Washington, Operatic Society' to play in Philadelphia. Perhaps he should have tried us out in Laurel first. One week when the Philadelphia Opera House was 'dark' all but one night they engaged the Washington genius to bring his troup and give 'The Smugglers.'

"The first night of that week, on the Monday, they had one of the great opera stars, Patti, I think it was, at the Opera House, and we opened on Tuesday. Maybe it was because they expected something professional or maybe because of the contrast with the Monday night performance—anyway, the Washington company was a terrible flop and the Philadelphia papers gave us a good panning.

"I am not sure just what happened to the 'Washington Operatic Society' after that. The performers, being all amateurs, took the Philadelphia fiasco very lightly. But I imagine it was a blow to the dreams of Sousa. But other interests and responsibilities came into my life and I didn't have so much time for amateur theatricals. I have always kept up my interest in music and have a tender memory spot for those operettas of my youth.

"And every time I drive through Laurel I wonder which street that old Opera House was on and what became of it."

By this time we were nearly in Baltimore and no more time for recollections but I promised the Old Native that the next time we drove through Laurel we would stop and go down some of the side streets to see if we could trace the Opera House. We might find someone there who remembers the opera house but I doubt if anyone in Laurel remembers the Washington amateur performance of 'Pinafore' 60 years ago.

Lincoln And The Communists.

JUDGING BY the sudden activity of the Communist in this country, their wheeling and ungainly hopping and flapping, they must think the American form of government is in its death throes. They pride themselves on their sense of timing and grow bold only when they feel that a nation is in agony. On their record in Europe, they are very bad judges of strength of nations, for they have repeatedly made the mistake of trying to pluck the eyes of a country which was not yet dead. The map shows that, except in Russia, they have failed wherever they made their move, and the net result is a loss of liberty for millions of people, a constant threat of another world war and a series of crushing victories for the very forces which communism opposes or pretends to.

PEGLER.

Most times it is impossible to perceive with the naked eye the difference to the ordinary human being between life under a Communist dictator and life under a Hitler or a Mussolini. The difference is too small to matter, anyway. And as for the period of confusion and massacre which intervenes between the death and the establishment of the dictator's discipline, it makes no difference what ism the mobs and their leaders claim to represent.

* * * *

THE RECENT Communist convention made much of a quotation from Abraham Lincoln to the effect that when this people decides to dismember this Government to establish an entirely different form it shall be their privilege to do so. If this utterance could be interpreted as a preference for communism it would serve their purposes better. True, they try to interpret it so, but obviously Lincoln's words gave equal indorsement to a Fascist or nationalistic revolution, and a movement of this kind, organized in resistance to disorder directed from Moscow, could, with equal right, flaunt the same phrase on its own banners.

Moreover, it will be futile for the Communists at this late date to attempt to convince the Americans that the Russain conspiracy against their country is an American nationalistic movement. Their methods are so unmoral, they are so long and thoroughly taught in conspiracy that they cannot put themselves in the mind of people who remember when they frankly proclaimed their allegiance and subservience to Moscow. Nothing could be more grotesque than the effrontery of the Communists in pitching woo at the Catholics in the hope of effacing momentarily their declared purpose to extinguish religion. And only Communists and Fascists, or Nazis whose mental habits are abnormal, could expect anyone to believe such an impudent protestation in view of the record of avowal and performance.

Dictatorship of the nationalistic kind is the reaction to the disruptive conspiracies of the Moscow internationalists. They select their time, make their play for power when patriotic nations are in deep trouble, and are repulsed and crushed by the fury of people driven mad by many provocations, the more exasperating because they are directed by foreigners sent from a foreign land.

* * * *

LINCOLN'S WORDS should be emphasized, but more as a warning to both wings of extremism than as a lure to the mass of the American people. The Communists, preparing the Americans for the thought of dismemberment of their form of government, may see a day when their activities bring the retaliation which has become routine in European contests and hear the same words flung at them from the other side.

Nor can they say then that fascism provoked the struggle. There is no fascism yet, but it will rise in due proportion to the activities of the Communists with their purpose of dismemberment. They are cunning conspirators and tongue clever in debate, but they seem incapable of learning, though they have delivered millions of people into a condition which they and we must agree is slavery.

It doesn't follow that in case of dismemberment they will be the butchers in charge.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Baccalaureate.

Gentlemen of the graduating class of 1938, I congratulate you on completing your college course, provided you have arranged to remain for post-graduate studies or can get something to do from your father!

* * * *

You have spent four years preparing yourselves for careers in the world outside these ivy walls and the "Help Wanted; Male" signs are scarcer than the day the old man sent you here, believing that by the time you got an education the country might have acquired some intelligence, too.

* * * *

You are now ready to take your place in the world but it is like finding your course in a fog. You have the instruments to plot such a course, perhaps, but this is a new kind of fog. And it is getting thicker in an era in which fog is regarded as compulsory.

* * * *

Not so many years ago your elders could speak to you, aglow with optimism and confident that intelligence, training, background and ability would open the path of success to you. Ah, for the good old days when it was not all done by microphones, alibis, Federal blue-prints and community grinning!

* * * *

Once upon a time a speaker could tell you the business and professional world eagerly awaited the well equipped young man. But that was in a period when equipment for survival in this country did not consist primarily of a life preserver, a set of flare signals and a copy of Hans Christian Andersen's "Success; or Why Be a Republican?" That, my young friends, was away back, when the fact that a man knew something, comprehended things quickly, had a keen grasp of facts and could think things out clearly all by himself did not constitute a serious handicap.

* * * *

Today I would lack candor if I painted your immediate future with roseate hues. If you are wise, you will stay for a P. G. course. Here, at least, your employment has its beneficial aspects. Within these hallowed walls it is possible to be out of a job and still not be open to criticism for playing the banjo and driving around town with three beautiful girls in your two-passenger flivver. Here, boys, you can take your unemployment in gay-colored sweaters and with the problem of pipe tobacco relatively trivial.

And so, I close this baccalaureate, delivered only as a matter of tradition, trusting you may spend the summer with parents who can afford it, and trusting you will not mind cutting the lawn and doing odd errands about the house. Good luck to you, men of 1938. But don't expect too much of it!

A Safe Bet.

A Texas man ate his hat on a bet that he would do so if he ever saw a pro-Roosevelt editorial. Up in Maine and Vermont you can bet you will eat an entire wardrobe and never have to swallow a soft collar.

Well, it seems that the depression is more than an "assumption" after all.

"Stocks Climb."—Headline. In the old days we would have called it nothing more than a slight rise in a fallen arch.

TVA Yardstick

Morgan Inquiry Emphasizes Mystery Surrounding Allocation Of Costs In Computing Charges For Federal Power.

By Merlo J. Pusey.

THE REAL CULPRIT in the TVA controversy is the so-called yardstick. When the story of the yardstick is told charges, recriminations and innuendo against individual members of the TVA board are likely to recede to the background. For directors may come and go, but the yardstick is designed to continue as a lasting national policy. If it is established upon a false or unsound basis, it will tend to discredit the entire Tennessee Valley experiment.

In passing the TVA act, Congress appears to have been particularly interested in ascertaining the costs of developing electric current. With the cost of power in a given area determined, it was said, public agencies could more accurately determine whether the rates charged by privately-owned utilities are reasonable.

To be of any value this power yardstick must obviously include all the costs of producing and distributing electricity under public ownership. That fact is realized by the TVA board as well as by the public. On several occasions David E. Lilienthal, director in charge of the electricity program, has declared that TVA's rates cover all the cost of power. In the announcement of rates for Muscle Shoals made September 15, 1933, he said: "The wholesale electric rates which the authority announced yesterday, while strikingly low, cover all costs of furnishing service . . ." In addition, he said, provision was made "for items of cost not actually incurred, such as taxes and interest, but which were nevertheless included in order to make fair comparison with privately operated utilities, for 'yardstick' purposes."

Again in a speech at St. Paul on January 8, 1936, Mr. Lilienthal referred to the TVA's rate-fixing mandate in these words:

> The component costs of producing and distributing electricity were to be recorded in such a way that they would form a useful and challenging basis of comparison—a yardstick of comparison—with costs in private and public operations in various parts of the country.

Lilienthal Impression Is Vastly Lower Expense.

THE IMPRESSION given by Mr. Lilienthal in testimony before the House Military Affairs Committee is that the TVA has reduced rates about 50 per cent, without any loss to the Government and with profits as high as 38 cents on the dollar to local distributing agencies. That appears to be a real achievement. It carries the implication that all privately-owned utilities, at least those in the Tennessee Valley, have been reaping unreasonable profits and that public operation of power facilities is far more satisfactory than Government regulation of private companies in this field.

As a result of the current investigation, however, it has become evident that the TVA does not know how much its power is costing. The dams in the Tennessee River have been designed for a three-fold purpose — navigation, flood control and generation of power. The cost of these projects has never been allocated to those three functions. Mr. Lilienthal was assigned to that task in 1933. But no report was available when Congress passed the TVA amendments in 1935. So it specifically called for the allocation to be made not later than the end of 1936. Even now, however, the TVA has not complied.

Undoubtedly this division of expenses among flood control, navigation and power is a complicated problem. The real cause of delay, however, appears to be the wide differences of opinion among members of the board as to the costs which should be attributed to the development of power. Mr. Lilienthal favors the by-product theory, under which the cost of power plants and equipment, but not the cost of dams, would be figured in electricity rates. Former Chairman Morgan is vigorously opposed to that theory.

There are indications that the by-product theory was used in fixing the rates for Muscle Shoals power. At any rate, Mr. Lilienthal stated that "an estimated property figure for the hydro-electric property has been used" in working out the TVA yardstick rates. In his speeches, moreover, he has consistently taken the attitude that power becomes available at TVA dams from the mere fact that water is falling.

In a memorandum prepared for the TVA board by Mr. Lilienthal in March, 1936, he pointed out that the Supreme Court had regarded power as a by-product in upholding the power of Congress to build and operate Wilson Dam. "That doctrine we must accept," he told fellow board members, "and in accepting it our pricing policies ought to be those of the sale of a by-product."

* * * *

SHOULD THE BOARD accept that reasoning in making its final allocation of costs as between power, flood control and navigation, its yardstick would be automatically discredited. For privately-owned utility companies do not produce hydro-electric power as a by-product of river control activities. There would be no reasonable basis for comparison of rates fixed for the sale of a by-product with rates charged by a company organized solely for the production and marketing of power.

Everyone familiar with the origin of the TVA, moreover, knows that the generation of electricity was one of the chief objectives of Congress in passing the act. Had navigation and flood control been the only aims very different types of project would have been undertaken. Indeed, the Army engineers had estimated that navigation works for the Tennessee River, with low locks and dams, could be provided at a cost of $74,709,000.

Average seasonal flood losses have been estimated by the Army Engineers at $1,784,061 for the Tennessee River and its tributaries. Daniel W. Mead, former president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, has pointed out that these annual damages could be readily paid by setting aside a fund of $51,000,000, bearing 3½ per cent interest. He concludes that only about $36,000,000 of the TVA's contemplated expenditures can be reasonably attributed to flood control.

Since the high dams built by the TVA may serve the purpose of navigation better than low dams, Mr. Mead thinks it would be fair to attribute $90,000,000 of the entire cost to navigation. That makes a total of $126,000,000, according to his calculations, for both navigation and flood control. But the total cost of harnessing the Tennessee, when large-scale power production is included, has been estimated at $479,150,000. In other words, the outlay attributable to power would be $353,450,000, and not merely the $135,450,000 to be spent on power-houses and equipment.

"On the unwarranted basis of the TVA estimates," says Mr. Mead, "it is apparent that it estimates the cost of power at about 2.11 mills per kilowatt hour. On a more reasonable basis of cost of the plants and of the power that can be sold, the probable cost will be from 5 to 7 mills per kilowatt hour. Steam power can certainly be generated in the Tennessee Valley for not to exceed 4 mills per kilowatt hour."

Correct Allocation Of Costs Said Needed.

HERE IS the real challenge to the TVA. That agency has pretended to set up a yardstick representing all the costs of producing electric energy. Most of its power has been sold on that basis. Yet the costs of the various dams from which this power is generated have never been allocated to flood control, navigation and power. And competent engineers assert that enormous sums properly attributable to the generation of power have been left entirely out of consideration.

It should be obvious to even a child that a yardstick set up under these circumstances is worse than useless. How can the TVA itself contend that a yardstick devised without the essential bases of fact is anything less than a fraud?

Certainly the TVA investigating committee should devote a major part of its attention to the yardstick. Until Congress has some idea as to the actual cost of power which is being distributed in the Tennessee Valley at low rates, it can not make an intelligent decision as to further expansion of the TVA. Nor can it accurately weigh the advantages and costs of a national policy of hydro-electric development.

In making his calculations as to the cost of TVA power Mr. Mead has probably overlooked some important factors. For example, the TVA dams should be of value in minimizing floods on the Mississippi as well as the Tennessee. It will be extremely difficult for the TVA to make an objective division of costs that will accurately reflect the relative importance of each element in its program. Unless that can be done, however, the only honest course will be to abandon the pretense that this triple-purpose undertaking affords a reasonable measuring stick for the power rates of privately-owned companies.

The public now knows that the majority of the TVA board adopted a yardstick without knowing how many inches it contained. But the extent of this deception and its effects upon rates and policies established by the TVA are still a matter of conjecture and controversy. The investigating committee has a unique opportunity to turn on the light.

Costly Error

By Barnet Nover.

The New Spanish Impasse And Its Results.

SEVEN WEEKS AGO Gen. Francisco Franco announced: "We have won the war."

He was not alone in this belief. The jig appeared to be up for the republicans. Their armies were, so it then seemed, in headlong retreat on the Aragon, Catalan and Valencia fronts. They had failed to prevent the insurgents from reaching the sea and, as a result, government-held territory had been split in twain. Catalonia had been invaded. The road to Barcelona was open.

On April 16, Franco's claim did not appear to be an exaggeration.

* * * *

IT WAS. Franco had miscalculated either his own side's strength or the enemy's weakness. Instead of a speedy victory there is a new stalemate which gives promise of lasting for some time. At any rate the Spanish civil war goes on.

This fact has seriously upset Gen. Franco's hopes and plans. It has also upset the plans of Mussolini and of Chamberlain as well. For that reason Spain remains today, as at all times since the civil war began nearly 23 months ago, one of the major European problems.

There is no disguising the fact that one of the assumptions back of the Anglo-Italian agreement of April 16, 1938, was that the Spanish civil war was nearing its end. That is why the British government agreed to hold up the actual operation of that agreement until after Italian "volunteers" had been withdrawn from Spain while, at the same time, insisting that those troops not withdrawn before the war had ended were to be withdrawn afterward. In other words, the British government assumed that there would not be time enough between the signing of the pact and Franco's final victory to get all of Mussolini's legions out of Spain.

* * * *

THE BRITISH government's basic assumption of an imminent victory for Franco made it possible for Messrs. Chamberlain and Halifax to envisage a Franco-Italian agreement as a supplement to the Anglo-Italian one.

The British government's reasoning was simple: With Franco certain to win there was no point in France antagonizing the insurgent generalissimo any longer. There was, on the other hand, much to be said for letting nature take its course particularly since, by virtue of a deal made with Mussolini, Spain's territorial integrity would be preserved.

* * * *

SINCE THEN nearly two months have elapsed. The odds regarding the outcome of the Spanish civil war remain with Franco. But as long as the war lasts the possibility of a victory by the republicans must be reckoned with.

At any rate the continuance of that war and the deferment of an insurgent victory which looked so very near last April have had important bearings on the international situation.

In the first place it has postponed the going into force of the Anglo-Italian agreement. Secondly, it has made it essential for Mussolini to cling to the Berlin-Rome axis which, with the Austrian buffer eliminated, ties the policies of the two dictatorships together with respect to only one major problem—Spain. Having "willed" an insurgent victory, Mussolini now finds it necessary to make that will prevail. That requires German assistance or, as an alternative, French acquiescence in a Franco victory. France has not acquiesced.

* * * *

IT IS NOT surprising then, that seeing the Chamberlain plan so rudely disturbed by Spanish republican refusal to play the role of vanquished assigned to them by London, the British government has resurrected the moribund nonintervention committee. The purpose is to revivify the nonintervention agreement and in that way, perhaps, pave the way for mediation. What the British want in Spain right now is a speedy peace.

The basis of every agreement, however, is and must be mutual trust and confidence. But these are qualities conspicuously absent in the Europe of today. Despite the fact, therefore, that all nations represented on the London committee, including Russia, have accepted the new British proposals, there is no certainty that they will go into force and, if they should, will be loyally observed.

* * * *

AT THE SAME time Franco and his Italian and German allies are seeking to break the deadlock in their own way. Despite the repeated and increasingly vehement protests by Grat Britain, France and the United States against the bombardment of civilian populations in Spain, such bombardments have continued to occur. Such tactics are a sign of desperation, of inherent weakness rather than strength.

Now it happens that it is not only Englishmen, Frenchmen and Americans who find such wanton attacks on defenseless civilians outrageous but also some of Franco's own colleagues. Not long ago, for instance, Gen. Yague protested against the mass slaughter of unwarned fellow Spaniards on the other side. But his protests, like those of the governments at Paris, London and Washington, have gone unheeded. Certainly Gen. Franco has not been moved to desist though he himself agreed to do so following representations by the Vatican.

* * * *

THE QUESTION now arises whether Franco is really master in his own house. If he has any anticipation of ruling Spain such bombardments are obviously a poor preparation for such rule. But he may have little to say on the subject. The major part of his air force are Italian and German in origin, personnel and presumably, control.

No wonder, then, that within the territory over which Franco rules, dissension has broken out between Spaniards and Italians on the one hand and between the Phalangists, whose ideology is Fascist, and the Carlists, who think in terms of the traditional Spain of crown and cross.

With victory in sight such dissensions, never very far beneath the surface during the past year, were shelved. The postponement of victory has apparently served as an effective dissolvement of such unity.

Basis Of Happiness

By William Lyon Phelps.

Character First Essential.

NOT BEING a physician and being ignorant of physiology, I know little about the value of sex instruction. Yet, however important sex instruction may be to those about to be married, there is one thing more important—character.

The reason character is the most important requisite for success in marriage is not merely that it happens to be the chief cause of happiness, but that those who have character can turn an unsuccessful marriage into a successful one, instead of taking the easy way out and acknowledging failure.

Since the greatest of all the arts is the art of living together, and since the highest and most permanent happiness depends on it, and since the way to practice this art successfully lies through character, the all-important question is how to obtain character.

The surest way is through religion—religion in the home. All that we know for certain of every person is that he is imperfect. Human imperfection means a chronic need for improvement. The most tremendous and continuous elevating, purifying, strengthening force is religious faith.

'Contact' Flying Held Cause of Airliner Crash

Flew Low When It Should Have Gone High, Says Board.

Flying in visible contact with the ground, although atmospheric conditions were unfavorable, probably caused the crash of the Lockheed airliner near Saugus, Calif., two weeks ago, the board of investigation reported yesterday.

"It is the opinion of the board," the report said, "that the probable cause of the accident was the continuation of the contact flight through mountainous country and over sharply rising terrain into weather conditions that made further contact flight over the route in question impossible."

At the time of the crash in which nine persons died, the new airliner, flown by Pilot Sidney L. Willey and Co-pilot Fred W. Whittemore, was en route from Burbank, Calif., to Las Vegas, Nev., where it was to be delivered to Northwest Airlines for use in scheduled air-transport service.

Visual Flight Is Policy.

After making an investigation the board held a public hearing at Burbank, Calif., and concluded that:

"It is the general policy of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation to make all delivery flights under conditions that permit visual contact operation, due to the possibility of marring the aircraft because of icing conditions which may be encountered during an instrument flight.

"Representatives of the purchaser were eager to take off and complete delivery of the airplane.

"From the weather sequences and forecasts available prior to the time the airplane departed from Burbank, it was impossible for a contact flight to have been completed over the contemplated route.

Instruments Available.

"The first pilot apparently failed to personally investigate the available weather reports.

"The airplane was not flown at an altitude sufficient to clear all ground obstructions (which altitude would have necessitated instrument flight), even though Mr. Willey held an instrument rating and there was installed in the aircraft all necessary instruments and radio equipment to make an instrument flight and directional range beacon facilities were available for use."

The inquiry board named by Acting Secretary J. Monroe Johnson was composed of Robert I. Hazen, senior airline inspector, chairman; R. L. Stephens, senior engineer inspector, and Robert D. Hoyt, aeronautical inspector, all of the Bureau of Air Commerce. Dr. Robert Kingsley, professor of law at the University of Southern California, was the advisory member of the board and concurred in its report.

House Authorizes Building for Army Medical Library

The House yesterday passed by unanimous consent a bill authorizing the Secretary of War to construct within the District a new Army Medical Library and Museum.

The measure limits construction cost to $3,750,000 and stipulates that the advice of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission shall be sought in selection of a site.

The present Army Medical Library and Museum at Seventh street and Independence avenue was constructed in 1887. Army officials testified recently that many valuable medical documents housed in the building are in constant danger of being destroyed by fire.

The Army Medical Library is now the largest medical library in the world, containing approximately 500,000 books.

The House also passed a bill authorizing the Attorney General to accept upon behalf of the United States title to the former home of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes at 1720 I street northwest.

142 Congressmen Assail Europe on Oppression of Jew

Condemnation of oppression of eastern and central Europe on Jews was contained in messages from 142 members of Congress to Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, made public yesterday.

The Jewish Congress has taken the initiative in mobilizing Jews of America to defend the rights of imperilled Jews abroad.

This month it is marking the twentieth anniversary of its establishment. It is seeking to create a united democratic front against anti-Semitism. On June 25, 26 and 27, every adult Jew in the country will be summoned to the polls to elect throughout the country 400 delegates to an extraordinary session which will adopt a program to battle anti-Semitism.

Senators quoted in approval of the undertaking included Borah, Idaho; Glass, Virginia; Wagner, New York; Van Nuys, Indiana; McNary, Oregon; Gerry, Rhode Island, and Capper, Kansas.

War Ace Designs 400-M.P.H. Plane Carrying 17 Guns

Los Angeles, June 6 (U.P.).—A wartime ace of the royal Austrian air corps, now an American citizen, revealed tonight he has completed plans for a new super-speed pursuit plane capable of pouring death from 17 machine guns at the rate of 20,000 bullets a minute.

Capt. R. H. Martin said he will leave for Washington within the next few days to lay before War Department officials blueprints of the plane.

The basic improvements in the ship were said to be new streamlining methods, motor speed efficiency and a revolutionary system of operating aerial machine guns. Martin said the plane would have a "cruising" speed of between 350 and 400 miles an hour.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

No Peace.

Now comes reaction to the A. F. of L. men in the Navy Yard who, the other night, walked out on a meeting with the yard commandant because representatives of the C. I. O. were in attendance.

The U. F. W. A. (C. I. O.) local in the yard tomorrow will distribute a circular asking the A. F. of L. members to reconsider their action "and support us in our fight for better working conditions in the yard." Blame for the walkout was placed by the U. F. W. A. on the A. F. of L. "top" and not on the men in the yard.

"We in the C. I. O. unions cannot believe that this is a true picture of the feelings of the rank and file members of the A. F. of L. We believe that these orders came from the top. We do not believe that the rank and file, having enjoyed the rights and benefits of organization for a number of years want to deny these same rights to the other men, in different occupations, working with them in the yard. We feel that this is a disruptive move in the labor movement and will result in weakening the strength of organized labor in the Government service," the circular will read.

Further, "we are asking you men in the rank and file of the A. F. of L. to think this thing out for yourselves, and support us in our fight for better working conditions in the yard." This seems to be the most direct appeal one union has made to an opposing one for teamwork and emphasizes again the strong feeling in C. I. O. ranks that the rift is caused and sustained by the A. F. of L. "top." It will be interesting to watch what becomes of this appeal.

J. Kelly, administrative assistant, National Capital Parks, wrote the script to be used in the "America's Hours of Destiny" broadcast at 6:30 o'clock tonight over Station WOL. Such points of interest as these will be related: Washington, D. C., is the eighth city to serve as a capital of the United States . . . How the marshy, low-lying land on the Potomac was chosen as the permanent site . . . The true and tragic story of Maj. L'Enfant and his plan for the city . . . The deal between Hamilton and Jefferson leading to the selection of Washington . . . The mobbing of Congress, proving the need for a Federal city and a safe meeting place for legislators . . . The fiery outbursts of the temperamental L'Enfant; the objections of the South against location of the Federal city in Northern territory "where Congress would be exposed to the insidious influence of the money power lodged in the hands of the New York merchants . . ."

Again, the cast will be provided by the Washington Civic Theater. In the cast are: Ted Field, Robert Duke, Harrison Libbey, Evelyn Adams, Mary Jo Day, Hazel Kirkpatrick, Robert M. Miller, William Rowand, Donald Sisler and Charles Grunwell . . .

Howard R. Stinson, Solicitor's Office, Interior, announces that the following employes of PWA have been appointed to the social committee of the I. D. R. A.: J. L. Acuff, Ingham Mack, Misses Janet Jackson, Louise Kayser and Catherine Lester, and Mesdames Dorothy Wilson and Edna Schwarz. These members will assist in distributing tickets throughout the Public Works Administration for the I. D. R. A. dance to be held June 17 in observance of Flag Day. The event will be held in the new cafeteria . . .

Note from our Agent 2-R: There is for the first time a provision in an act of Congress allowing for the hiring and firing of emergency employes under the Work Relief and Public Works appropriation act of 1938. Known as section 15, the provision gives the departments, "so far as not inconsistent with efficient administration," the power to hire and fire in accordance with the apportionment laws. Former soldiers, sailors and marines are given preference in retention in service.

U. F. W. A. Local 10 meets at 8 p. m. Thursday for a lengthy business session, to include a report by the adjustment committee; a report from the I. U. C. delegate on organization work among laundry employes in the District; election of a delegate to the Industrial Council of the U. F. W. A. A delegate will be elected to the Washington Labor Peace Committee. At the conclusion, the Capitol Hill Choir, of U. F. W. A. Local 31, will give a recital . . . Gov. Blanton Winship, of Puerto Rico, is in town on official business . . . Recent retirements from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are announced as follows: Franklin Butler, 609 Rittenhouse street northwest, an engraved steel die finisher, 20 years' service; Nicholas H. Greene, 137 Randolph place northwest, spreader, 19 years; James L. Bell, 1350 B street northeast, press cleaner, 35 years; Charles H. House Rejects 3 New Memorials, Painting for D.C.

Proposed memorials for the Capital ran into difficulties in the House yesterday as members raised objections to consideration on the consent calendar.

Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, blocked a bill reported by the Library Committee to authorize the establishment of the Columbia Fountain within the District.

After a spirited debate the House refused to suspend the rules to pass a bill authorizing the purchase of a painting by Howard Chandler Christy of the signing of the Constitution.

Treadway criticized two other paintings Congress has bought from Christy, one the portrait of the late Speaker Henry Rainey, now hanging in the House corridor, and the other a portrait of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, hanging in the White House.

The House also refused to approved bills to complete the Navy and Marine Memorial on Mount Vernon Boulevard and to establish a memorial to Newton Baker.

U.S. Soon to Standardize Bank Examining Method

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau said yesterday an agreement for standardization of bank examining methods of all Federal and State agencies was imminent. The first step, he said, may be ready for announcement within a week.

Conferences on co-ordinating bank examination were initiated by Morgenthau several weeks ago at the request of President Roosevelt. The co-ordination efforts concern the classification of loans, the impounding of bond profits and similar technical details.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Washington's Film Bookings Embrace "Best of the Month"

Local First-Runs Represent 'Cream of the Crop;' World Premiere for Keith's; Preview; Notes of the Theater World.

BELL.

THE June 1 issue—and the last until September 1—of "Selected Motion Pictures," the informative brochure published monthly by the Will H. Hays organization to reflect the joint opinions of nine West Coast reviewing organizations, having just come to hand, it is interesting to note the seven feature releases deemed "Best of the Month" between May 1 and June 1, 1938.

These preferred productions, in the order of their listing, are as follows: "The Adventures of Robin Hood," Warner Brothers; "Cocoanut Grove," Paramount; "Holiday," Columbia; "Kidnaped," Twentieth Century-Fox; "Three Comrades," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; "Vivacious Lady," RKO-Radio, and "Yellow Jack," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Of this number, Washington, of course, already is familiar with "Robin Hood," "Holiday," "Kidnaped" and "Vivacious Lady," all of which are currently being shown on local screens to a measure of public approval comparable to that expressed by the reviewing committees serving the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., which is by way of being the Will H. Hays organization.

"Yellow Jack" and "Three Comrades" are the next bookings, respectively, at Loew's Capitol and Palace Theaters, the first to open on Friday of this week; the second as soon as Bing Crosby and "Doctor Rhythm" clear the way for it at the Palace.

"Cocoanut Grove" seems to be a little further away—how far, I wouldn't know. It is Paramount's unique musical having Hollywood's famous Cocoanut Grove, from which it derives its name, as its locale. The principal roles are played and sung by Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue and those gay zanies, the Yacht Club Boys.

If the pictures on this roster which the Capital has not seen are as good as the ones it has, some sort of accolade ought to be bestowed upon the Pacific Coast previewers.

• • • •

One suspects that failure to adhere to a long-standing resolution never to go to bed before 4 a. m., or disentangle oneself from the hay prior to 2 p. m., yesterday cheated this column out of a preview glimpse at "Three Comrades," originally scheduled for the eyes of scribes tomorrow. While out wandering around, bewildered, in what usually is the middle of the night, I missed the phone call that Ray Bell—no relation—tried to get through advising me of the change in plans. A short-wave lapel radio set suggests itself as a possible solution of similar difficulties in the future. That is, if there is any such thing as a short-wave, lapel radio set—which I very much doubt.

• • • •

Speaking of new pictures coming to town, it has been definitely settled, finally, that Bobby Breen will come to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater on Friday in "Hawaii Calls," in which this talented boy soprano sings several new songs. There was some question of this booking, owing to the possibility of a joint world premiere of "The Rage of Paris," starring Danielle Darrieux, to be divided between Boston and Washington on June 10—which would be Friday.

The Washington-Boston premiere of the Darrieux vehicle, her first made in America, now has been set for one week later, Friday, June 17. This will be an occasion of some fuss and feathers and general hurrah, since "The Rage of Paris" is held by those who already have previewed it to be a superior footage of celluloid that is entitled to a little extra attention in the matters of exploitation and ballyhoo. Or are they the same thing?

• • • •

Reverting to "Three Comrades," which we didn't see yesterday, it may be offered as a reminder, nevertheless, that this is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Ehrich Maria Remarque's latest novel of the three youths who returned from the World War to confront serious difficulties in reorienting themselves in a changed world. The cast is headed by Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Robert Young and Margaret Sullavan. The novel has been banned in Germany, but has been produced in motion picture form by M.-G.-M. as originally written. I am told by some who had better luck than your reporter yesterday that it is an appealing and poignant drama, beautifully directed by Frank Borzage—which is easily understandable, since Borzage is a veteran director who makes very few mistakes.

• • • •

Take this fellow Bob Hall, who is appearing as one of the specialists on the stage bill at the Capitol this week. Bob for years has presented an act that is unique among vaudeville turns. He is the world's inveterate rhymster, who composes impromptu lyrics from headline news suggested by members of the audience. He can contrive a jingle on the spur of the moment, the lid of his trunk, the back of an envelope or anywhere else, on instant notice.

To be sure, a great deal of his rhyming probably wouldn't scan and holds no immediate threat to the eminence of Shelley, Keats, Browning or even Longfellow, but it does reflect an amazing mental alertness, quick thinking and enough of a command of cadence to make it jell for all of vaudeville's practical purposes.

I first met Bob Hall on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City many years ago, when he was playing the Globe Theater, and he and Harry Fox and I spent an hour or two or three or four digging back into the dim days of the "varieties." Since that time, I never have known Bob to give two performances that were alike. And he has no competition. He is the only one of his kind.

• • • •

In case you do not immediately recall Harry Fox, who seems to have gone into permanent eclipse these latter years, he is the old vaudeville singing comedian who married one of the Dolly Sisters about the time Jean Schwartz married the other one. He got his stage start in burlesque under the driving tutelage of Dave Marion, famous as "Snuffy, the Cabman," and always was at battle with Eddie Leonard over which got there first with that peculiar "wha-wha-wha" style of putting over song lyrics. Personally, I never was able to determine which was the chicken and which was the egg—which wouldn't have done much good, anyway, since I never have found out which of those two got there first, either.

• • • •

Just to keep the record straight, Rosemary, featured in "Gold Diggers in Paris," coming to the Earle screen on Friday, is "in the middle" of the Lanes. Lola is the oldest sister and Priscilla is the baby of the family. Two other Lane sisters are not in Hollywood or any branch of motion picture work.

Rosemary is known in the family as the "healthy Lane" and is known at home as "Raspberry," a childhood nickname which she likes, but has been advised not to be too hot for show business—for obvious reasons.

Of the three Lanes in pictures, Lola is the dramatic actress, Priscilla is the comedienne and "Raspberry" is the musician—which seems to be a generous distribution of talents in a single family.

• • • •

And tomorrow the most beautiful and most talented of the "Gold Digger Girls," in the person of Etheldreda Leopold, comes to town for a day of sightseeing. It has been planned, so I hear, to pack a week's schedule into 24 hours—a good trick, even if you can't do it! The drama desks will meet Miss Leopold at a press luncheon tomorrow at 1, at the Washington, and those of us of the masculine gender probably never will be the same again!

Voice-From-the-Back-of-the-Hall Note.

"What makes you think you ever were, anyhow?"

Just the Thing.

Mothers whose children visit Jane Withers need not worry about soiling their clothes while playing, for Jane's mother has overalls of various sizes which the children don while they frolic about the young star's enormous play-yard.

Champ.

Jacqueline Laurent, young Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress, was a French swimming champion when she was 14.

Barbier Back.

That grand old man of comedy, George Barbier, returns again to the Twentieth Century-Fox lot when he starts production this week in an important role with Sonja Henie in her fourth starring vehicle, "My Lucky Star."

Star Linguist.

Clark Gable had to learn to speak Chinese before starting his role as a newsreel cameraman in China in "Too Hot to Handle."

Stars Soon to Be Seen on Local Bills

Movie Chorines, By and Large, Prefer Their Work to Acting

As the locale of many a rags-to-riches real life drama, Hollywood is infested with ambitious young women eager to play the principal role in yet another. And one of the tried, if not true, tales the movie capital has cherished in its works is that of the unknown chorus girl who is suddenly vaulted to stellar rank, stops the show and goes on to fame and fortune.

But, oddly enough, the most unambitious group in Hollywood today are the cinema chorines. They are about the only girls in the town who do not expect (and don't particularly wish) to achieve movie renown. Shop clerks, waitresses, the demoiselles of the beauty salons, secretaries, nurses and the unemployed of the feminine population dream of screen fame, but not the chorus girls.

Their reason, according to a survey of a representative group appearing in Warner Bros.' new musical, "Gold Diggers in Paris," due at the Earle Friday, is chiefly economic.

Movie showgirls are well paid and find their services in steady demand. They move from one studio to another with seldom a lengthy interruption.

The work isn't especially hard and, while she's busy at it, the chorus girl gets the best of makeup, hairdressing and beauty treatments at the expense of the studio. But, best of all, they are not responsbile for the success or failure of the pictures in which they appear.

If a picture is a flop at the box-office, the star, the director, the producer, even the featured players or the scenarist may be blamed; but you never find critics or the public condemning a movie because of the chorus girls in it.

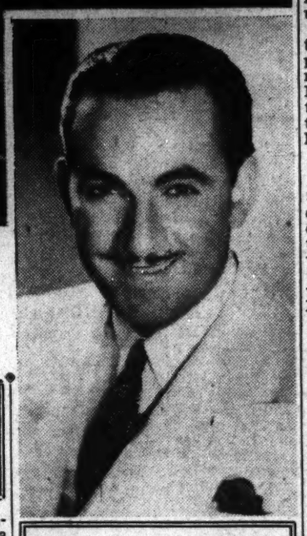
There's another reason for many of the girls who currently provide the choreographic background for the lively new films. They're married.

And, as Edna Callahan, one of the married, puts it:

"Our husbands would never want us to make pictures our entire career. Movie work, as a career, demands every bit of your energy and usually spoils you for real domesticity. But as it is, we show girls just work enough to keep us amused, and in pocket a bit, and husbands don't mind that at all."

The unmarried among them can also cite specific reasons for preferring a job in the chorus line to more remarkable niches in the screen world.

"Ingenue actresses," says Rose Tyrell, a striking brunette who appears in "Gold Diggers in Paris" and has been in three other of the "Gold Digger" productions, "are a dime a dozen in Hollywood. But good dancers aren't that common and if you are one you can always get a job. I'd rather be a chorus girl, working in one musical after another, than a featured player who spends years doing the same sort of role and too often winds up with nothing better than playing in Westerns where she has nothing more to do than look demure."



In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 6.—Lucille Ball, starring in "The Affairs of Anatole," at RKO, has another Cinderella story. But her good luck didn't happen overnight. She arrived five years ago as a platinum blonde, being known as "The Chesterfield Girl." She came here to appear in "Roman Scandals," expecting to be here six weeks and has been here ever since.

HEDDA HOPPER

Through good, solid hard work, under Mrs. Lela Rogers' dramatic eye, she went through show girl, bits, dramatic parts and comedy. She darkened her hair to chestnut and cracked out as a real actress in "Stage Door" and "Joy of Living." Now it looks as though her romance with Director Al Hall will lead her to the altar just about the time she finishes her first starring picture. All of this is nice work if you can get it.

Pueblo, Colorado, is proud of its first motion picture celebrity. Arleen Whelan's 67-year-old grandmother is taking bows as the town's first lady. Arleen, working in "Ellis Island," is sending her mother on for the opening of 'Kidnaped.' The town is plastered with huge placards, reading: "Our own Arleen Whelan, star of 'Kidnaped,'" forgetting that Warner Baxter and Freddie Bartholomew are in it, too.

The payoff on Mike Romanoff is this: He wrote for himself a wonderful part in "Ellis Island," but he's not playing it. They found, on the screen, that he was unconvincing as Mike Romanoff. But his pain was lessened because his great friend, Gregory Ratoff, is impersonating him.

Think of earning $1,000 an hour through no effort on your part. That's the salary of each little Dionne. They are only permitted to work an hour a day. Twentieth Century-Fox expects to be 20 days shooting the picture, which gives them $100,000. They've already got more than $600,000 in Canadian government bonds. And they tell us girls deplete a father's income—ho hum!

Now, come, come, Binnie Barnes! You know better than to say you can dress on $300 a year—that all it needs is a bit of thought and careful planning. What it requires is a miracle. Dress in what—burlap?

Pierce Hall

A group of talented exponents of the drama, who are students of S. E. Cochran's National Academy of Stage Training were presented last evening in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, in a diversified dramatic menu of one-act plays, in which was included a revival of "War Brides," the original Nazimova production which stirred the country to an unprecedented degree of patriotism when it was first presented during the World War.

Last night's program also included "Back of the Yards," an allegory of modern youth; "The Burglar," a rollicking comedy farce; "The Tin Whistle," a true story by Bertrand Robinson; a short and snappy comedy, "What Price America," in which the juvenile class of stars, of from 4 to 12 years, appeared; "Charlotte Grows Up," a pint-size comedy in which pupils from the junior class of the academy were seen; a picturesque Chinese drama, "Toy Heart," a short drama based on the "Madame Butterfly" motif, and a novel presentation of a pantomime, "He, She and It" which depicts an amusing domestic jangle.

Tonight, Mr. Cochran will present the pupils of his academy in Goldsmith's best known comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," with the director of the academy, George Vivien, in the amusing comedy role of Tony Lumpkin.

PennerRepents 'Duck'Business And Nasty Man

Comedian Learns Lesson and Ceases to Be the Bane of Universe.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Placerita Canyon, Newhall, Calif., June 6 (U.P.).—We rolled out here among the boulders today, planning to take a swat at the man who irritated all America with his inane phrase: "Wanna buy a duck?"

We also intended to give him an extra poke for his other verbal atrocity: "Oh, you nasty man!"

Only a couple of years ago virtually every child big enough to listen to the radio was trying to sell his parents a duck. He was calling his father a nasty man—and his father was figuring on ways of exterminating that public nuisance, Joe Penner.

The Penner menace, in person, was here today in the canyon making a movie—and boy!—we rolled up our sleeves.

Before we'd got a chance for even the first whack, though, he was explaining the duck trouble and the nasty man business. Poor devil. He's still trying to make amends for the hate which the loudspeakers of this Nation's radios engendered for him years ago.

Not Joe's Fault.

He said it wasn't his fault in the first place. Warily we rolled down our sleeves and listened to his tale of woe between takes on his picture, "I'm From the City." Penner was dressed in RKO's fanciest cowboy suit and having a lot of trouble with a horse, so his story was a little disjointed. It went like this:

"I'd thought up that duck business for my vaudeville act. I brought in some new lines about that nasty man. They went over fine in vaudeville. They went over too well.

"Then I got a job on the radio. They wouldn't let me do anything but sell ducks and say 'you nasty man.' That went on for months. People began to hate me. The critics said more mean things about me than any other comedian. Still I was selling ducks and saying things about a nasty man. The radio people wrote all my scripts and insisted that I say what they wrote.

"It finally got so bad that once while I was playing in vaudeville in Brooklyn, I came down to the theater ahead of time to find a line of customers in front of the box office. It was snowing. There was one man there with his four children. Do you know what they were doing? They were trying to sell him a duck. And every time he'd tell 'em to shut up, they'd chorus:

"'Oh, you nasty man!'

"He was so mad he'd have killed me if he'd had the chance. I pulled my collar up around my face and sneaked in through an alley.

"It was then that I got up on my hind legs and told the radio experts that I was through, finished, quit, and if they didn't like it they knew what they could do. I even left town. Later on, they came after me and said I could write my own program.

"That's what I've been doing. I've been trying to repair the damage. I'll never say another word about a duck. I won't even mention men again. I promise."

We shook hands on that.

Is Hypnotized Bareback Rider.

Penner turned out to be one of the pleasantest, kindliest actors we've yet met in Hollywood. He also was funny. That's something, these days, for a screen comedian.

His picture has him playing the part of a circus bareback rider who can ride a horse only when hypnotized. The plot brings him out to the great open spaces and his mesmerist comes along.

"And I've never been on a horse before in my life," Penner said, "and am I sore."

The canyon was dry. It was hot. It was so dusty that R. K. O. had to bring along its own grass, in rolls, like a carpet. We had lunch with Penner on this grass. He ate only thin sandwiches of salmon salad he'd brought from home in a suitcase. He did that because he must wear spangled tights in his movie and hence can't get too fat. After lunch he smoked a cigarette—and almost burned a hole in R. K. O's grass.

Cooper, Halliday Given Roles in Durbin Picture

Universal has begun to line up the cast for Deanna Durbin's next starring picture, "That Certain Age."

Two important roles have been filled, while a third is in the process of registration.

Jackie Cooper, the former child star, has been signed for the male juvenile lead. Out of the "awkward age" and a young man now, he is heading toward adult stardom, and his role is a big step in that direction.

John Halliday, one of the screen's finest character actors, has been set to play the part of Deanna's father.

Negotiatoins are under way for Irene Rich for the part of the mother. If the deal is completed it will mark the return to screen of a famous personality. Miss Rich has been devoting her time evclusively to the radio.

"That Certain Age" will go into production within the next few weeks. It will be produced by Joe Pasternak, producer of all of Miss Durbin's pictures, and will be directed by Edward Ludwig.

The story will have a slightly further development of romance than there was in "Mad About Music," with two boys, instead of one, but the romance definitely will be adolescent in its nature. The studio plans no serious picture romance for the young star for some time to come.

The cult that shook the nation's press. Believe it or not—it happened in America! Amazing  Sensational  Unbelieveable.

Glen Echo Park.

Variety, that spice of life, characterizes the activities of Tom Gentry and his "sweet music" orchestra, which made its bow to patrons of Glen Echo Park last night, in the Spanish Garden Ballroom.

From the applause of the dancers, we are assured that Jeanne Carroll, the vocal star of the outfit, is as talented as advance reports indicated. Week-end business in the ballroom, and all over the Glen Echo amusement park, was extremely satisfactory. The "World Cruise" seems to be one of the first things the crowds go for. Then they make the rounds of the new Dodgem Rides, the slick boats on the waterway canal, the Airplane Swings, Coaster Dips, Pretzel, Midway and other smaller amusements.

Big Business.

Arleen Whelan never knew until she went into the movies just how good her business used to be as a manieurist. Out of hundreds of fan letters she is receiving from Hollywood and Los Angeles, about eight out of every ten writers tell her that they were once good customers of hers at the Hollywood barber shop where she worked before going into Robert Louis Stevenson's "Kidnapped" with Warner Baxter.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Government Workers Charged With Coming Here "Man Crazy," Bent on Marriage.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your contributor of June 3 who signs herself "Native Girl," led with her chin into a very moot problem. The whole trouble with Washington girls, particularly those of the Government-worker classification, is that they suffer from horrible inferiority complexes. The operations of their defense mechanisms are about as subtle as the workings of a threshing machine. They don't know how to go about mowing down the opposite sex, and wouldn't know how to bind them up if they had mowed them down.

• • • •

The average female Government worker arrives in Washington after her pappy shot her down out of a tree, put shoes on her, armed her with a bag of apples and oranges, a letter to her Congressman and last year's almanac, and shipped her off via the day-coach route. She arrives in Washington man-crazy. After a month in the Government service, all she wants is to get some gent to marry her and support her so she can sit home and soak her lame dogs, keeping within the confines of a cozy little apartment that stupidity which made her a joke in a public office.

• • • •

Those who don't get married, get sillier and sillier as time goes on, and by the time they've been here 20 years they're superannuated, completely frustrated Government clerks with an efficiency rating minus 200, who bark and snarl their way into oblivion. Their clothes, for the most part, look like they had been bought with soap coupons. One prime difficulty with these babes is that they were considered hot stuff back in the bush country, and so when they show up here and aren't rushed off their feet, they holler bloody murder. They are the eternal prom-hopper type, and if they don't get a chance to step around, they say, "Down with the men." They like to think of themselves as elusive trout which must be caught, not realizing that that line went out with the disappearance of the high wheel.

• • • •

As far as apartment-visiting is concerned, a man's most innocent invitation to a lady guest to step inside provokes such pre-bellum retort as, "Oh, but I'm not that kind of a girl," or, "I know your type!" or, "I bet you try that on all the girls." She reacts like something out of an Esquire cartoon. As a matter of fact, if a man has plenty of dough and a nice apartment, he may have to beat the girls off with a club; and if he happens to have any political influence to boot, he may have to take to the storm cellar. If the local female talent would grow up, mentally, the local gents wouldn't have to take to the bottle to forget it all.

• • • •

The thing to do with these misguided females is, either send them to night school; turn them in for 1938 models, or just laugh at them. Possibly the last suggestion is the best. (You run a swell column, Mary. Please keep confidential—if you can read it—the Government office address on this letter. Thanks.)

M. L. C.

A Vigorous Blast!

DEAR M. L. C.: I get the impression (correct me if I'm wrong) that women Government workers are scarcely your idea of femmes fatales. May one cautiously observe, in regard to it, that as one man's opinion it is vigorously presented, to say the least? However, in your respective appraisals of the Government-girl situation as it affects the local social scene, you and "Native Girl" seem not only to approach the phenomena from different angles, but to arrive at strangely unrelated findings.

• • • •

"Native Girl's" principal lament was to the effect that the Government girls seem to have a corner on the local matrimonial market; or, at any rate, that these alien invaders are giving the home-town girls such spirited competition for the attention of the numerically rare and concomitantly precious male that many of the aforementioned home-town girls haven't a worthwhile beau to call their own. You, on the contrary, and with crackling scorn, give testimony to support a directly opposite belief.

• • • •

Whereas "Native Girl" would "send the daggone Government girls back home where they belong," because they're such a threat to the Washington-born girls' peace of mind, you would "laugh at them," as being rivals more comical than conquering. Obviously, the truth must lie somewhere in between. The subject seems to call for further discussion. Perhaps the "Government girls," in a few well-chosen words, can instruct us in the matter.

Sympathy for "Hazel."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Hazel," appearing June 1, was the most amusing letter I have ever read in your column. I say amusing, because any 14-year-old girl who has the good common sense and sense of humor that Hazel has, can meet any problem. I extend to her my sympathies, as I am the youngest of a large family where each successive member made progressively better grades in school. By the time I got to high school the problem of maintaining the "family record" was a terrific burden. Fortunately or otherwise, I have the faculty of getting good grades.

• • • •

I should say that instead of her family's intelligence having been exhausted before it got to Hazel, it would appear that most of its social intelligence has been saved for, and transmitted to, her. Added to that, she can't be so very stupid, from the academic viewpoint, if she is a junior in high school at the age of 14.

• • • •

May I offer a few suggestions to Hazel? Here they are: Suggest to your father that he take some instruction in education at some modern teachers' college, such as Columbia. For yourself, see if your family won't send you away to summer camp, where you can be out in the open for two months, away from the stuffy scholastic atmosphere of your home. And when the time comes for you to go to college, ask your folks to let you go to a progressive school, like Bennington College in Vermont. There your wide-awake attitude will be appreciated and you will be given an opportunity to lead the life of the healthy, normal, intelligent girl you seem to be, and to integrate the knowledge they offer with real life.

• • • •

It was parents such as Hazel's who made a young fortune for me while I was in college. They made such wrecks of otherwise promising children that tutors had to be called in—and I, as a tutor, was much in demand. And for my services I was handsomely paid, with an accompanying, "Thank you, sir!"

PHI BETA KAPPA '30.

Needed Encouragement.

DEAR P. B. K.: Such a big-brotherly pat on the back should do a lot for Hazel's morale. That's exactly the sort of encouragement her family should be giving her. If the time ever comes that she seeks a tutor, I hope she has the rare good fortune to find one as understanding of adolescent nature as yourself—a sentiment in which Hazel would concur, I am sure. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

For Garden Party Enchanting

NEVER did garden party clothes offer women such romantic opportunity. Dresses to be worn among the roses are designed to give the effect of sweet, sentimental, frail femininity and to carry a suggestion of Maud Muller, Annie Laurie, Ben Bolt's Alice and all the other maidens of dear old by-gone days. The devastating gown above shows what can be done with white organdie if you are going either to a garden party or even a moon-lighted terrace. This dress has all the elements of feminine appeal—it's white, it's diaphanous and it's made with a billowing skirt containing yards and yards of material. Tuck trimming and a flounced hem give it a quaint old-fashioned touch. The sash of red organdie gives it a bit of modern dash. Designed by Alix. A white felt hat trimmed with colored felt leaves and flowers is its accompaniment

What You Never Learn.

That you cannot turn your back on toasting bread.

That what you tell your best friend in confidence, she will repeat to one of her "best friends"—and most certainly to her husband.

That you cannot put off doing something about your waistline until some time when you are not so rushed.

That the dress made by the wonderful little dressmaker on the other side of town that someone told you about is not going to look like the picture you chose in the fashion magazine.

That you are never going to train any man—husband, father, brother, et cetera—to call up when he is going to be late to dinner.

That even the stodgiest of husbands left on his own through a long summer is going to weaken when some little office girl tells him she is so lonely evenings and never gets to go anywhere.

That you are going to have to fix the kitchen faucet yourself, eventually.

That no matter how strong an oak you drape yourself about, that sooner or later you will find its trunk leaning for support on your tendrils.

Normal Weight, Muscle Tone Factors in Bust Development

General Build-up of Health Is Needed; Arm Exercises Advocated to Strengthen Entire Chest Area; Chinning Is Good Practice.

By Ida Jean Kain.

HEALTH, normal weight and good muscle tone are interwoven in the foundation of a lovely bust contour. Keeping these factors in mind, there is no reason for you to feel discouraged about this measurement. It can be improved, perhaps perfected.

Weight is the first consideration in the improvement of the bust. When the weight is excessive, the accumulation of fatty tissue in this area makes the measurement appear overdeveloped. Since these tissues are especially susceptible to fatty deposit, the overly large bust is characteristic of overweight.

Sagging of the bust is due to the strain of weight on the supporting tissues and to lack of good muscle tone. Exercises to strengthen the pectoral muscles are as important as weight control. The sagging line of the heavy bust can be raised and the contour firmed through specific exercise of the pectoral muscles.

Health Program First.

The underweight girl with the undeveloped bust, characteristic of low vitality, must adopt a general program to improve her health, and the first step is to bring about an increase in weight. Because vitality must be built up to the point where a weight gain is possible, there may be no noticeable improvement for months. The sum total of consistent health measures will, however, eventually result in a marked improvement in the figure, and particularly in the bust measurement.

Good muscle tone is essential to the normal high position of the bust and exercise is as necessary in the program of the underweight as it is in that of the overweight. Whatever is done about the weight, exercise is the uplift measure in perfecting the bust.

The pectoral muscles supporting the bust spread fanwise over the chest and are inserted in the upper arm. Therefore, all arm exercises help to tone these muscles.

Chinning Good Exercise.

One of the most effective of the uplift exercises is to hang from a bar with the arms supporting the entire weight. This exercise tends to strengthen the muscles of arms, shoulders and bust. You may even get so you can chin yourself!

The resistance type of exercise is also excellent. Place the left fist in the cupped right hand, elbows bent and hands on a level with the bust. Holding the arms at this level, push forcibly from one side to the other, resisting with the opposite hand.

In general exercise, the heavy bust should be protected by an uplift brassiere, but extreme care should be taken that the garment is never tight and binding.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

IF IT IS true (and who am I to doubt it?) that every hound has his day, then the industrial designers are having a whole year of it! These alert gents create everything from a 10 cent home-gadget to a railroad train, and just now most of the local fraternity are busy on World's Fair things, in addition to their other stunts. The other day I saw a whole posse of them at the penthouse home of Henry Dreyfus, one of the best of the lot. And how they do go on!

ALICE HUGHES

Russel Wright has designed things from cups and saucers up; Raymond Loewy, once a crack fashion artist, has created the entire interior decor of an ocean liner, and Donald Deskey, Walter Dorwin Teague, and Henry himself literally stop at nothing. They have endless arguments over "functional design"—and they seem to believe they can do anything—anything at all.

Take the crowd of creators at Henry's party the other afternoon. They all agreed on one thing—that they could design women's clothes as well as any Schiaparelli, Vionnet, Claire Potter or Elizabeth Hawes. Well, a few of us girls called them on that one, sharply and challenged them to sew up or shut up. So maybe these cocky men will produce—something.

One thing I am certain of, and that is that practically all of these talented gents are married and that they insist on helping choose their wives' wardrobes. Thus the shoe slips on the other foot, for most of us style-loafers stick our fingers into our men's dress problems, and often get them well smacked. Of all the creative minds in New York, the industrial degisners are by far the proudest and most confident. All right, big shots—let's see your clothes!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Among our great variety of Flora, Fauna and other well-known girls, we have a pair of chronic royal-marriage-attenders in Mr. and Mrs. Post Wheeler, Mrs. W. being the novelist, Hallie Erminie Rives. The Wheelers have a fine score for the past season, since they were present at the nifty nuptials of Egypt's King Farouk and Albania's King Zog—who always seems to me to be a character in "The Wizard of Oz." The Wheelers are now relaxing until some other monarch or princeling pops the old question and gets "yes" for an answer . . .

Greatest example of name-changes leading to stark madness here is probably the case of the Countess Kotzebue, who before that was Princess Henry XXXIII of Reus, and before that was Mrs. Anson Woods Burchard. Today's HEALTH TALK by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Vision of Babies.

A baby that lies in its crib and rolls its wise-looking little eyes from side to side appears to be observing this new-found world, but it distinguishes at first nothing but light and darkness. Later, objects, and only after some time, distinct focusing of objects.

Our ideas about a pet animal's world are also likely to be distorted. We assume that his sensory world of vision and hearing is like ours, but it is probably quite different, and the wild animal's world even more so.

Dr. John Warkentin, a young scientist at the University of Rochester, has been testing animal vision as a preliminary to a study of infant vision.

His apparatus consists of a vertical hollow cylinder, 5 feet high and 4 feet in diameter, on the inside of which are vertical black and white stripes ranging from 5 inches down to one-sixteenth of an inch. If an animal placed inside the cylinder makes eye or head movements following the rotation of the cylinder, it is assumed that it can see the stripes, and the narrower the stripe perceived, the sharper the vision is assumed to be. Through the use of these tests it was found that:

White rats, white mice, and Gila monsters have extremely poor vision. Frogs, toads, alligators and opossums have poor vision. Snakes, contrary to popular supposition, have good vision. Those tested included garter snakes, king snakes, ribbon snakes and rattlesnakes. Their vision is poorest just before shedding their skins and best just after shedding, because the snake's cornea grows opaque as shedding time nears and is sloughed off with the skin. Turtles, woodchucks, guinea pigs, rabbits and gophers have good eyesight. Cats and birds see best of all.

Guinea pigs and dogs vary greatly from one individual to another. Monkeys could not be tested because they kept peering curiously over the cylinder's top. Wild rabbits see better than tame rabbits; normally pigmented creatures see better than albinos.

We will be anticipating Dr. Warkentin's report of his work on the vision of human infants.

President Greets 827 Guests in Garden Fete for Disabled Veterans at White House

Pleasant Party Follows Four Postponements; Mrs. Hull and Mrs. James Roosevelt Assist Executive in Receiving.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

The fifth time was a charm. After four postponements because of inclement weather the annual White House garden party for disabled veterans took place yesterday afternoon—the fifth date set for it.

With sunlight sifting through the trees and slanting across his white suit, the President shook hands with 827 guests. More than 1,400 had been invited. The First Lady, who had planned to come to Washington especially to attend the party, was not present. She was at the bedside of her secretary, Mrs. Malvina Scheider, who is ill in a Poughkeepsie, N. Y., hospital.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Receiving with the President was Mrs. Cordell Hull, in a handsome black and white ensemble, and Mrs. James Roosevelt, whose powder-blue and white figured frock was set off with a wide-brimmed hat. One of the most colorful al fresco events of the year, yesterday's party drew not only disabled veterans, but also scores of Red Cross nurses, members of veterans' organizations, representatives of each State from the United States Veterans' Administration and a sizable number of Cabinet, Army and Navy officials.

Among the first persons going down the receiving line were the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. Malin Craig, who accompanied Mrs. Craig and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson; the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy and Mrs. Leahy; the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and the Commandant of the Navy Yard, Rear Admiral George Pettingill, and Mrs. Pettingill, Gen Craig, Admiral Leahy, Gen. Holcomb and Admiral Pettingill all were trimly turned out in white uniforms, resplendent with braid and decorations.

Lariat Artist Entertains Crowd

While the long line of guests moved along to greet the President, William H. Trantham, self-styled "artist of the lariat," stood in the center of a large circle of onlookers executing some neat tricks with the rope and accompanying each party of his act with his own special brand of chatter. After the receiving line had passed through, and the President had ridden through the grounds in a long black touring car, the Howard University Glee Club gave a half-hour program of varied selections.

In the crowd were scores of disabled veterans in wheel chairs, and on crutches and canes. They, too, went down the receiving line and shook hands with the President. Introductions were made alternately by the President's Army aide, Col. Edwin F. Watson, and his Naval aide, Capt. Walter B. Woodson, both of whom were crisp white uniforms.

Following the veterans in the receiving line were a large number of Red Cross nurses, grouped according to the color of their uniforms—the motor corps in gray; the canteen unit in light blue and white; staff assistants in yellow and white; the production unit in dark blue and white; the health aides in pink and white. Also a center of much attention were the Gray Ladies of the Red Cross, volunteer workers, dressed in keeping with their title, and including in their ranks many of Washington's most prominent women.

Adding further splashes of color to the scene were the regular Red Cross nurses in white uniforms topped with either red-lined midnight-blue capes or blue caps, depending upon whether they were connected with Walter Reed Hospital or the Naval Hospital.

Civil War Veteran Near Head of Line

Col. John T. Ryan, 91-year-old Civil War veteran and the last survivor of the Battle of Monocacy, was near the head of the line of guests. He discovered that President Roosevelt had been over the battle grounds and the line of guests came to a halt as the two chatted briefly of the bitter engagement fought in the Maryland hills 73 years years ago.

Concluding his talk with the President, Col. Ryan found his way to a seat not far from the improvised stage, where members of the canteen unit served him and where he later enjoyed the program of songs, given under the direction of Prof. Roy W. Tibbs, of Howard University.

The Marine Band turned out in snappy blue coats and white trousers and, seated on a platform close to the stage, played one piece after another, until the Howard Glee Club took over the program. The President, with Mrs. James Roosevelt and his two aides, sat in his automobile, listened and applauded as the glee club presented a number of selections, including several Scotch and Italian folk songs.

At the conclusion of the program, the President requested the sipirituals, "Honor" and "Blow Gabriel." He then asked the singers to file by his car and shake hands. A few minutes later the car in which he sat skimmed across the grass once more and pulled up to the doorway of the White House.

Even after the President had disappeared through the doorway to the White House, the band continued to play. Listening intently to one of its final patriotic medleys, one guest, 89-year-old Charles Fox, recalled past White House garden parties, and—much further back—the days of 1864 when he enlisted in the Thirty-ninth New Jersey Regiment as a lad of 16.

Another reception guest was 70-year-old Maj. G. O. Van Meter, of Riverdale, Md., oldest American volunteer officer in the World War.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

DESPITE the presence at the door of an imposing major-domo to check the list of those invited, a few people every year manage to crash the garden parties at the British Embassy. Rather than throw out bodily these unbidden ones, the list checker asks them to sign their names in a little black book, so that if anything is missing the hosts will have a vague idea where to look.

DUDLEY HARMON

Nobody can say, as many have, the British Embassy isn't democratic, when at two parties in one week it will have entertained about 3,000 Washingtonians, representing a cross section of the Capital.

THE ARMY of June brides has a new recruit in the person of Miss Frida Frazer, who had originally selected September as the month for her wedding to Thatcher Winslow. Invitations for the reception are out, setting the day as Friday, June 24, and the place Ranleigh, Miss Frazer's home near McLean, Va.

Reason for the change is that Mr. Winslow, who is with the National Youth Administration, has to make a business trip to Seattle and a tour of the West early in July. So the couple will spend an American honeymoon, instead of sailing for Italy as they had originally planned.

A tiny house, overlooking the swimming pool at Ranleigh, is now in the process of being built for the pair, who will occupy it for the remainder of the summer after their marriage.

Mrs. Frazer, who is a member of the Washington Junior League, is the daughter of Mrs. Randolph Leigh. Only the two families and a few close friends will witness the wedding, although the reception afterwards will be attended by several hundred.

Petworth Woman's Club To Meet in Afternoons

Change, After 24 Years, to Convene on First Thursday of Month Instead of First Monday; Anniversary Fete Set Friday.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Petworth Woman's Club, after 24 years, has decided to have its meetings in the afternoon instead of at night. The club members, at their annual session last night at Petworth School, voted to meet the first Thursday of each month at 1 p. m. instead of the first Monday at 8 p. m., as has been custom until now.

Another change made in the club by-laws provided for merging the civic and education sections. Mrs. Horace Phelps is retiring as chairman of the civic section after serving for two years, and Mrs. Harvey Craver, a member of the Petworth School teaching staff, is retiring as head of the education section, after a two-year term. The new civic and education section will have Mrs. Carl Maholm as its chairman for the coming year.

Officers of the club are elected for two years and the present ones have another year to serve. They are Mrs. Oscar H. Nelson, president; Mrs. Frank M. Stuart, first vice president; Mrs. Harry C. Sigourney, second vice president; Mrs. Frank J. MacMaugh, recording secretary; Mrs. Frederick R. Shearer, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. J. K. Utley, treasurer.

The club, which started originally as a community group, now has a membership of 140, many of whom have moved out of the Petworth district but still are active in the organization.

The reports last night showed that during the past season the philanthropic committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Mildred Kimball, had made 110 garments, including children's clothes and comforts. These have been given directly to needy families in the Petworth community or distributed through missions and the nursery school. Mrs. Kimball, after serving as head of this committee for three years, is retiring and the chairmanship is being taken by Mrs. D. K. Bauer.

The Visiting Nurse committee, under direction of Mrs. Sue Richwine, has made 128,803 surgical dressings and supplies for the use of the Visiting Nurses Association. Another group headed by Mrs. B. J. Waldo has made bedside bags and supplied 1,500 magazines to Walter Reed Hospital.

The Florence Crittenton Home committee is another which carries on a welfare program. It is comprised of four members who go to Florence Crittenton Home to teach the girls knitting, crocheting, tatting and hemstitching. Mrs. J. K. Utley is chairman of the group, with Mrs. Leonard Russie, Mrs. Richwine and Mrs. R. H. LeCraw the other members.

Following the business meeting last night a memorial service was conducted for four members who have died during the year. They are the late Mrs. George W. Stose, Mrs. Jennie Howe, Mrs. George P. Monck and Mrs. George Clarvoe. The service was conducted by Mrs. Henry J. Smith, wife of the Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church.

Friday the club will celebrate its anniversary with a luncheon at the Congresional Country Club, at which Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will be guest of honor and speaker. It will be the third occasion within two weeks in which Mrs. Dunbar has addressed a luncheon meeting of a District club.

The program also will include songs by Mrs. Madalynne Cheatham, accompanied by Mrs. R. L. Bond, and readings by Mrs. Florence Gianiny.

Mrs. Ellis Logan, who was sponsor for the club when it became a member of the federation, will be among guests of honor at the luncheon, as will Mrs. LaVerne Beales, a past president, who is now first vice president of the District Federation.

Mrs. Maholm is general chairman of arrangements for the luncheon and Mrs. Raymond S. Hart, transportation chairman.

Last night the membership committee of the Y. W. C. A. had its final meeting of the season, a dinner at 6:15. Miss Jessie Smith, chairman of the membership committee, presided, assisted by Mrs. Frederick M. Feiker, vice chairman. Group singing was led by Miss Mary Burnett, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Haight.

By Suzanne.

MRS. ANN SULLIVAN HAGAN has been elected president of the Home Economics Women in Business of the District of Columbia. The District organization has a membership of 40, comprising one of the largest groups in the national membership of 465. The HEWIB has had monthly dinner meetings during the past season and has been addressed by outstanding women in commercial home economics.

The trade home economists are employed by business firms to interpret their viewpoint to the consumer—in most cases the housewife. The HEWIB requires of its members a home economics degree and six months successful experience with one firm. It is the only branch of the National Home Economics Association which sets standards of training as a membership requirement.

The local organization has among its members women employed in household equipment firms, radio, home service, restaurants and tea rooms, journalism, food service departments of drug stores and the canning industry, dairies and ice cream companies.

Officers, in addition to Mrs. Hagan, are Miss Ethel-Jean LaMond, secretary treasurer, and Miss Bernice Burns, program chairman. Mrs. Hagan is with the Chestnut Farms Dairies, Miss LaMond with the Peoples Drug Co. and Miss Burns with the Electric Institute.

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES

(A few quirks of the extraordinary envoys; for culture's sake, try to pronounce their names.)

While he commanded Paraguay's army against Bolivia, Minister Jose Felix Estigarribia smoked only one cigarette a day, after lunch . . . Ambassador Mario Pimentel-Brandao of Brazil is one of the few diplomats in Washington who wears a monacle; bad eye . . . While prospecting in Canada, Joao Antonio de Bianchi, of Portugal, learned to chew tobacco.

Sicilianos
. . . no to $45,000

Quite properly, Cuba's Ambassador, Pedro Martinez Fraga, dances the rhumba . . . As a journalist, Finland's Minister Eero Jarnefelt used to interview celebrities by long distance phone, recording their answers on a dictagraph . . . Faik Konitza, of Albania, both reads and speaks 13 languages.

• • • •

Both sons of Swiss Minister Marc Peter (Pay-tehr) have married American girls . . . All three sons of Ambassador Colon Eloy Alfaro of Ecuador are at West Point or preparing to enter—and the two now at the Military Academy are getting higher grades in all subjects than the Ambassador got in any when he was a cadet there . . . Peru's Ambassador Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander is the only foreign diplomat who was born in Washington.

"— His Excellency wants a bear"

Once Ambassador Mehmet Munir Ertegun of Turkey drove all the way to Chautauqua, N. Y., to visit the American woman who taught him English in Turkey 37 years ago . . . A rabid golfer, Senor Don Felipe Espil of the Argentine says he plays a Civil War game—"Out in 61, back in 65."

• • • •

Famed is Count van der Straten-Ponthoz, the Belgian Ambassador, because he said Washington is more beautiful than Brussels . . . Once a bridge builder, for relaxation Chile's Ambassador Manuel Trucco solves trigonometry problems and builds mechanical gadgets in a workshop at the embassy.

• • • •

Currently the devout aspiration of Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador (one of the handsomest adornments of the Corps), is to shoot a Kodiak bear in Alaska; he's obtained all the dope from the Biological Survey . . . Outwardly austere, Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, likes poker and American spirituals and can sing snatches of Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera.

• • • •

Oddly enough, despite strained relations in Asia, Ambassador Alexander Antonovich Troyanovsky of Russia and Ambassador Hirosi Saito of Japan are pretty good buddies—they knew each other in Moscow and Tokyo . . . When he's all dressed up Mexico's Ambassador Don Francisco Castillo Najera may wear 20 medals—he's the most decorated diplomat in Washington.

"—diplomats are good fencers"

For the floods of Americans who go to Italy, lured by 100 lira for $5 or less, Ambassador Fulvio de Suvich is responsible; he organized the Italian Tourist Bureau . . . Like quite a few diplomats, he's a good fencer . . . The Nazi Ambassador, Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, is not a Nazi; he has belonged to no political party.

To illustrate what a foreign diplomat has to do: This spring Minister Constantin Fotitch of Yugoslavia lent prestige to a Yugoslav basketball tourney at Gary, Ind. . . . No fewer than 12 initials troop after the name of Canada's Sir Herbert Marler, a diplomat who admits nothing more incriminating than his golf score—90 to 99.

Back in Bulgaria Minister Extraordinary and Envoy Plenipotentiary Dimitri Naoumoff (that's the full title) is a rather close buddy of his King, Boris III . . . On the living room wall at the Greek legation hangs El Greco's painting, "St. Francis of Assisi," for which Minister Demetrios Sicilianos turned down Andy Mellon's offer of $45,000 . . . He'd like to present a Greek tragedy by Aeschylus at the World Fair next year, but he suspects that what the fair crowds will want is streamlined hootchy-cooch.

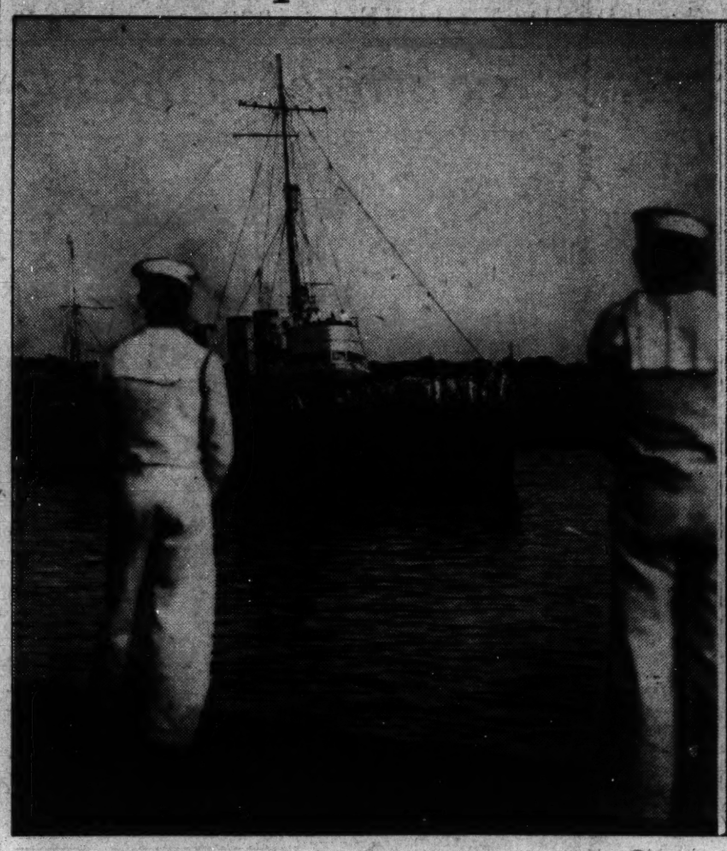
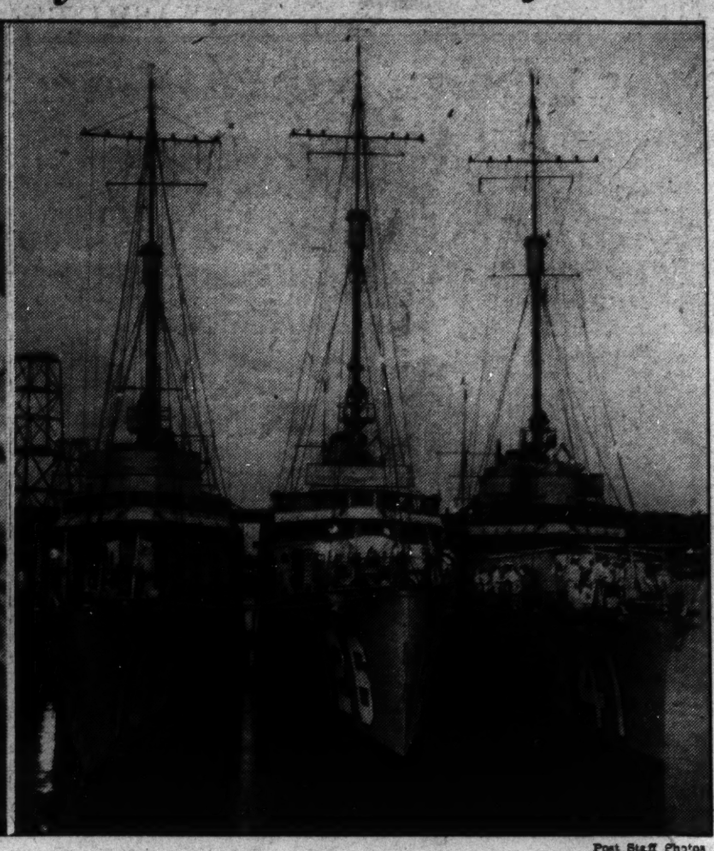
158 Annapolis Cadets Study at Gun Factory Here





Post Staff Photos.

The U. S. S. Fred Talbott steams up the Anacostia River to the Washington Navy Yard with midshipmen passengers as two sailors await her arrival (left). The Fred Talbott, Badger and Decatur, three of the six destroyers which brought midshipmen here, tied up at the Navy Yard (right).

Six sleek destroyers bearing 158 Naval Academy second classmen docked yesterday at the Navy Yard, where the midshipmen will study the operation of the gun factory.

Lieut. W. I. Leahy, a member of the staff of Capt. Joel W. Bunkley, commander of the squadron, said the students had been brought to the Capital to see guns in the making.

"There is much to be learned by seeing practical work in progress which cannot be gained from books," he said.

Although social events are not being "sponsored" by officials, the midshipmen admitted they were looking forward to ilberty during their evenings with much anticipation.

"We had additional privileges in June Week which just ended," one of them said," and the freedom was worth working for the whole year. Just the same, all of us will be glad to get out in a city again."

He also confided he had been lucky in getting liberty for tonight, because midshipmen on leave last night had only six hours, while those free this evening will have nearly eight.

After visiting the gun factory the Naval Academy students will go down to the Naval Proving Ground at Dahlgren, Va., where the giant cannon are tested.

Leaving here the midshipmen will go to Newport, R. I., to visit the Torpedo Station and Naval War College; New London, Conn., site of the Submarine School; New York City, where they will inspect the Hayden Planetarium as part of their study of navigation, and the Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va.

Meanwhile, the other 330 members of the class began practical training in navigation, seamanship, engineering and aeronautics. During the summer all members of the class will make a cruise, one-third at a time. The second trip will begin July 5 and last one on August 1.

The destroyers carrying the midshipmen are the Decatur, J. Fred Talbott, Fairfax, Leary, Herbert and Badger. From 24 to 27 second classmen are aboard each ship.

R. P. Perry Given Arlington Burial; Native of District

Funeral services for Ralph P. Perry, former employe of the United States Shipping Board and a member of the Rainbow Division Veterans, were held yesterday at the S. H. Hines funeral home. He was buried with military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

Perry, a native of Washington, died Saturday in Buffalo, N. Y., where he had been employed since leaving here several years ago. He was 46 years old.

At the outset of the World War, Perry enlisted in the First Field Hospital unit of the District of Columbia National Guard, later designated as the 165th Field Hospital of the Forty-second (Rainbow) Division.

The Rev. Arlington A. McCallum officiated. Members of the Rainbow Division acted as pallbearers.

Surviving Perry are his wife and his mother, Mrs. Alice Perry, of 3701 Sixteenth street northwest.

Brothers Accused In Jail Smuggling

Two brothers, one of them a prisoner, were charged in Federal indictments returned at Alexandria yesterday with introducing contrabrand into Lorton Reformatory and dealing unlawfully in marijuana.

They were William and Gurney Taylor, the latter a prisoner at Lorton. Justice Department investigators said narcotic cigarettes were smuggled into the prison on visiting days.

Takoma Park Residents Split Over July Fourth Celebration

Two District Citizens' Units Break Custom of Joint Festivities as Association Votes to Hold Firework Display in Maryland.

Members of the Takoma Park Citizens Association will celebrate the Fourth of July in Maryland this year with the customary fireworks, but without their neighbors across the District line.

At a joint meeting last night, the Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., and the Manor Park Citizens Association voted to break their usual custom of participating with the Maryland group because the crackers will be set off in Maryland instead of in the District.

"This is the first year that there won't be a joint celebration," a member of the Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., said last night.

"They want the celebration to be held in Maryland on Hodges Farm at the Philadelphia avenue grade school; but we have a new recreation center in Takoma Park, D. C., that we think is more suitable," he added.

Metropolis View

Miss Sibyl Baker, District supervisor of playgrounds, last night urged members of the Metropolis View Citizens Association to campaign for a field house on Edgewood Playground, at Lincoln road between Franklin and Evarts streets northeast.

A committee to explore possibilities of obtaining the fieldhouse and to arrange for supervised play during the summer for the younger children of the neighborhood was appointed under chairmanship of William Clements.

Other committee members are Mrs. P. J. Ashe, Mrs. W. Harris, Mrs. William Flinchum, Mrs. Charlotte Walden, James Sherwood and Harold Mericle.

The association will sponsor a concert by the Elks Boys Band at 7:30 p. m., Thursday, at Edgewood Playground, it was announced.

Clayton Is Indorsed

The Kenilworth Citizens Association last night indorsed William McK. Clayton for the post of District Commissioner.

Approving the proposal to place the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in east Washington, the association urged that the structure serve some useful purpose.

Retiring District Commissioners Sultan and Allen were commended by the association. The members approved limitation of the number of taxis and requirement of liability insurance for cabs, and asked increased appropriations for clinical work in District public schools.

The meeting, presided over by Charles Maize, was held in the home of the secretary, Mrs. Mabel M. Hubbel, 4606 Quarles street northeast.

D.C. Police Watch Freight Trains for BaltimoreGunmen

Washington police last night were watching incoming freight trains and railroad yards for three men, one described as "armed and very dangerous," after a Baltimore gun battle in which a railroad telegrapher and special policeman were wounded.

Baltimore authorities said Harry S. Lins, special policeman employed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, brought the three men to a telegraph tower to question them, and the white man drew a gun. Herbert C. Fornwaldt, telegrapher, told police Lins fired and accidentally shot him in the abdomen and leg.

Lins, shot in the right arm by the white bandit, was certain he hit one of the fleeing gunmen in the leg.

Dance Teacher Weds to Climax Pupils' Exhibit

Roma Lee Hawn Becomes Bride on Theater Stage in Surprise Briday.

Roma Lee Haun, who has been preparing her 50 dance pupils all year for their annual review at the Wardman Park Theater, waited until the end of their performance last night and then staged a show for herself. She got married, right on the stage.

Miss Haun, who celebrates her nineteenth birthday today, had promised her youthful students of the dance that if she ever got married she'd have them all at the ceremony. She certainly did. She had their fathers and mothers and aunts as well—some 400 of them—all gathered at the Wardman Park Theater.

It was a surprise for everybody, except Miss Haun and the bridegroom, John E. Welch, director of Ambassador Hotel Health Club. Others in the know were Miss Haun's sister, Mrs. Jean Haley, who was matron of honor, and the best man, Ray Borgman.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry Snyder, of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut avenue and Everett streets northwest.

With a consummate gift for showmanship, Miss Haun set the stage well for her nuptials. The last act on her dance program had been a mock wedding, with her young students acting out the parts of all the principals and providing the pageantry. Then the customers were treated to a bit of the real thing.

Dark and beautiful, Miss Haun swayed down the aisle as the orchestra started the wedding music. Only a few minutes before she had been on the platform, dressed in a glittering top-hat and tail-coat costume. She had changed quickly and was wearing a trailing gown of white silk net, the train borne by little Nancy Lee Watson, one of her pupils.

Widowed Peahen Elopes With New Peacock at Zoo

The peahen widow of the peacock recently devoured by the Zoo's polar bear, cast aside her black veil yesterday and took a new mate—the peacock acquired by the Zoo to replace her husband.

The couple eloped only a few hours after they met. They really eloped, too, jumping the fence that surrounds the peacock pen and heading appropriately enough for Cathedral avenue.

The widow forgot not only her late husband but the eggs she was hatching as well. But she was back late last night, on the eggs once more and, presumably, dreaming of her new husband. Residents in the Connecticut avenue-Cathedral avenue section remarked that the wedding was about as noisy a one as they'd ever heard.

Bar Leader Hits Eastern Law Schools

Order of Coif Inducts 21 at Fete; Speaker Awarded Key.

Arthur Vanderbilt, president of American Bar Association, last night called on seniors of the George Washington Law School to help in adapting the American legal system to the needs of the time.

Vanderbilt spoke at a banquet of the George Washington Chapter, Order of the Coif, national honor society, held at the Raleigh. Conway P. Coe, United States Commissioner of Patents, and Gilbert L. Hall, Washington attorney, with 19 members of the senior law class, were inducted into the society.

By special vote of the chapter, Vanderbilt was given the key of the society for distinguished service to the American legal profession.

Need for Reforms.

Reviewing advances in legal ethics during recent years, Vanderbilt said reforms in the field of judicial administration were needed "before we can call ourselves a civilized nation." He added every judge should have freedom from political influence, a background of experience in the legal profession, and security in office.

Vanderbilt declared: "It depends on you to see we come out of this period, when all standards appear to be changing, with something fair, something sensible, and something that will be adapted to the needs of our times."

Vanderbile scored the legal system of Maryland for permitting the jury to be the sole judge not only of the facts but of the evidence. He attacked low standards of legal education in Eastern States and the District, and praised requirements of four years college work and three years law school for admission to the bar in Kansas and New Mexico.

Britons Best Lawyers.

Vanderbile declared the English have the worst system of legal education in the world and yet have the best lawyers. He said their legal education offered mostly dry lectures, without the lively interchange of question and answer found in American institutions.

In contrast, he said, the quality of the English legal system is high, because the lawyers are the pick of the English universities, because each lawyer is on his own in a highly competitive system, and because "the further they go, the harder they work."

Officers elected were J. Forrester Davison, president; John W. Jackson, vice president; Chester C. Ward, secretary-treasurer; Miss Marjorie Rawalt and Ned C. Arick, members of the executive committee.

14 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Those are strange goings-on in the National League. We mean the trade announced yesterday by the Cincinnati Reds and the New York Giants. The deal sent Second Baseman Alex Kampouris from the Reds to the Giants in exchange for Outfielder Wally Berger. That one wasn't expected.

It wasn't expected because for the lack of a second baseman the Giants were skidding woefully, had lost their league lead, had absorbed six straight lickings and were a declining power in the league race. That was the way other clubs who entertain pennant notions liked to see it. Two years of domination by the Giants had become irksome.

POVICH.

The one thing that figured to restore to the Giants most of their former power was the acquisition of a second baseman. But it was not anticipated that any club that still figured in the pennant race would wilfully supply the Giants with that need.

Of all clubs that might turn over a second baseman to the Giants, the Reds were one of those least expected to do it. Because the Reds, thanks to the Giants slump, had made much progress in the National League race, had pulled themselves out of the second division into a position only four games behind the lead. They were among the clubs that were profitting most from the Giants' skid.

There's no doubt how the Reds are now being regarded in Chicago and Boston. To the Cubs and the Bees, the Reds' act in sending Second Baseman Kampouris to the Terry's team is little short of traitorous. And the Reds, who have recently reestablished themselmes in race, may discover that they have recreated a horrible menace to their own ambitions.

Story With a Moral

When, and if, blond, bow-legged Joe Krakauskas establishes himself as a big league pitcher his story will contain a moral. Because he will have made good under circumstances that might have disheartened a less gallant fellow.

Ever since the season started, the left-handed Canadian has been the ugly duckling of the Washington pitching staff. All the promise he conjured last fall in his first trial with the Nats he dissipated in the spring training camp when he showed an absolute lack of control.

He had a fast ball, that was admitted. And he had the stamina to keep firing it for nine innings. Be he apparently had no idea where it was going. In the South his every appearance was a farce. Any time the batter swung he was doing Krakky a favor, because it reduced the danger that Krakky would walk him. him.

His Washington teammates became disgusted with him, no less. When he was pitching, the fielders saw little action, shifting their weight from one foot to another in restless impatience. There were loud mutterings anent Bucky Harris' trifling with wild left-handers while veteran pitchers needed work.

When the season opened, Harris couldn't afford to start Krakky. He couldn't take a chance on his wildness. So back to Trenton and the long bus rides and the cheaper hotels went Krakauskas, a rank failure.

Washington got him back a couple of weeks ago not because Harris wanted him back, but because Trenton didn't want him. It seems that Krakky figured in a nine-run inning in his first start for the Trenton club. The Trenton manager didn't want that kind of a pitcher. Because he was still the property of the Nats and because Clark Griffith had no other Class A farm, the big blond found himself back on the Washington club.

Stopped 'Em Cold.

In the dressing room, conscious of his failures, he had nothing to say. He was merely being tolerated, he knew. And he knew, too, that he was lucky to be attached to a big league club. But he took his daily workouts.

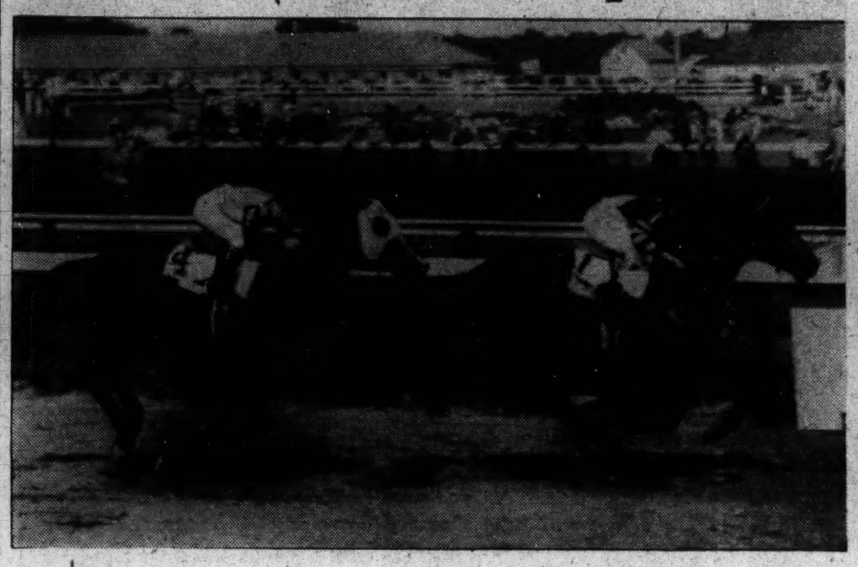
And then, the other day, with the Nats trailing Cleveland, 11-4, Harris let him pitch in the late innings on the theory that there was nothing to lose. And that day, Krakky, with his blazing fast ball, stopped a "hot" ball club. He stopped 'em cold without a hit in the three innings he pitched.

That performance earned him new respect. And so yesterday, with the score tied in the eleventh inning, Bucky Harris entrusted bland Krakky with the Nats' pitching again. This time it was no gesture of despair, but one of confidence. It was no time to gamble. Harris had developed a new faith in the fellow.

That faith appeared greatly misplaced when the first Cleveland batter in the eleventh, Earl Averill, whacked out a two-bagger and placed the potential winning run on second. Here, indeed, Krakky was in a spot. Again there must have been mutterings on the Washington bench. And then the rookie pulled himself together, struck out Trosky, rid himself of Keltner and Pytlak on easy chances to deliver the Nats from danger.

That was pretty fair pitching for a guy that Trenton didn't want.

War Admiral Wins at Aqueduct... Case Stretches Double Into Triple



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

War Admiral, making his first start since early this year, is shown racing to a length victory over Snark in the Queen County Handicap of a mile, opening-day feature at Aqueduct. Note that each horse has all feet off the ground as they appear to be "flying" to the finish. Kurtsinger rode War Admiral.

Case, Washington centerfielder, was safe by a hair in the sixth inning of yesterday's game with Cleveland when he stretched a legitimate double into a triple. Keltner, Cleveland third baseman, has the ball in his mitt and misses tagging Case by a fraction of an inch. Bonura scored on the hit.

War Admiral Beats Snark

Takes Mile Event at Aqueduct Track.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 6.—Samuel D. Riddle's War Admiral, champion 3-year-old of 1937 and winner of the Widener Challenge Cup in March, returned to competition today with a length victory over the Wheatley Stable's Snark in the mile of the Queens County Handicap at the opening of Aqueduct today.

After trailing Rudie for the first half-mile and then carried wide at the stretch turn, the Admiral stepped to the front and, under Charley Kurtsinger's great ride, staved off Snark's closing bid. J. D. Norris' Danger Point trailed by eight lengths and Rudie brought up the rear.

The Admiral, 11-to-20 choice to win the purse of $4,425, ran the distance under 132 pounds in 1:36 4-5, only four-fifths of a second off the track record after reeling off the first six furlongs in 1:11 2-5.

The victory was the Admiral's eleventh straight and boosted his total earnings to $236,050.

Giants Trade Berger to Reds For Kampouris; Terry Pleased

Cincinnati, June 6 (AP).—Alex Kampouris handed in his Cincinnati Reds uniform tonight and turned westward with the New York Giants, as Manager Memphis Bill Terry considered his worries over second base position at an end.

The veteran Outfielder Wally Berger remained behind to don a Redleg uniform tomorrow. The Berger-Kampouris straight trade was announced by General Manager Warren C. Giles, who said no cash was involved in the deal.

Kampouris, the only Greek player in the National League, attracted attention with his powerful hitting last year by knocking three home runs in one game against Philadelphia. He was the only slugger to set this record in one game in the season.

He belted 17 homers, drove in 71 runs, but had the unimpressive batting average of .249. Kampy started roving second base for the Reds in 1934, coming from Sacramento in the Pacific Coast League.

Berger, after seven seasons with Boston, went to the Giants in June last year. He led the National League in home runs in 1935, tied Kampouris' mark of 17 last year, and hit .285.

Helen Dettweiler Wins D. C. Title Play Medal

Fires 79 Over Indian Spring Course to Pace Large Field; Marion Brown Shoots 81; Match Competition Set Today.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

It was the same old story in the qualifying round of the District Women's Championship yesterday at Indian Spring—Helen Dettweiler.

For the Congressional star, victor in the Maryland State event already this year and defending champion in this tourney, breezed around the Four Corners layout in 79 strokes, two ahead of Marion Brown, for medalist honors.

The medalist's round included four three-putt greens, but at least one and maybe three strokes were saved on the twelfth hole where her chip shot from some 20 yards off the green found the cup for a birdie, or eagle on the women's card.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern, with an 84, despite five three-putt greens, recorded the fourth lowest score of the day, while the host club southpaw swinger, Mrs. K. S. Giles, and Mrs. H. M. Brundage, jr., Columbia Club champion, were next with 85s.

The 16 players that will start match play in the championship flight today include a majority of the "name" players, with only Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. C. P. Medley, Indian Spring, missing among the players that figured to qualify.

Scores of 91 or better made the grade in the championship bracket, with Ellen Kincaid, host club player, just making the grade after running into trouble on the sixteenth hole and finishing with a 12, including five trap shots. Without that score she would have been among the low scorers.

Miss Dettweiler, who won two events on the winter circuit, and has cleaned up locally with the low gross score on the Miller and Keefer Cups, in addition to her medalist prize in the Maryland State and medalist honors in the same tourney, ran into two of her four three-putt greens on the third and fourth holes.

She played even men's par until the ninth, however, where she took four shots. The holed chip shot on the twelfth enabled her to be even par for the first three holes on the back nine but she ran into a 6 on 13 after trapping her second and taking three putts.

A par on the fourteenth followed but another three-putt green cost her a stroke on 15. She finished 5—4—4, chipping within 2 feet of the cup on the final hole and clinching the medalist honors by knocking in the putt.

The fourth hole was indirectly responsible for Marion Brown not tying the medal, as she pulled her second shot behind a tree and wound up with a six. Her back nine of 40 was tied for the lowest of the day, while Miss Dettweiler and Mrs. Stokes each played the front nine in 39.

Mrs. George Hussey, course record holder at Army and Navy, and Louise Claytor, Chevy Chase, qualified handily with 86's while two of the semifinalist in the recent Maryland tourney, Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, and Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, were safely in with 87's, a score matched by Mrs. Betty Meckley, host club favorite.

The medalist and defending champion, who is now one of the heaviest favored players ever to compete in a local tourney, nevertheless draws a tough assignment today in Miss Kincaid, while other feature matches include Marion

Pirates Bow To Dodgers

Brooklyn Scores Early to Win, 9-4.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 6.—The Brooklyn Dodgers did all their scoring in the first two innings today to turn back the Pirates, 9 to 4, as big Max Butcher hung up his fourth victory of the year by keeping the Bucs' ten hits well scattered.

Eleven men went to bat, seven of them hit safely and seven of them scored in Brooklyn's big first inning, which saw Veteran Red Lucas shelled off the mound. The Dodgers continued their bombardment against Mace Brown, who gave up two more in the second before being relieved by Bill Swift.

Kiki Cuyler, with a triple and two singles, and Cookie Lavagetto, with a double and two singles, paced the Brooklyn attack. Both of Cuyler's singles came in the first. Ernie Koy, with a two-bagger and a single, drove in three runs.

Bosox Trip Detroit, 8-7

Doerr's Hit Is Climax of Two Late Rallies.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 6.—Trailing 7 to 2, going into the last half of the seventh, the Boston Red Sox today put on three rousing rallies to nip the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 7, and carry off the odd game of the series.

Little Bobby Doerr's clean single over Shortstop Billy Rogell's head, with two out in the ninth, scored Jimmy Foxx from second with the deciding run, climaxing an attack in which the Boston batters assaulted Boots Poffenberger and George Coffman for 18 hits. One of them was home run No. 14—with no one on in the fourth—for Jimmy Foxx, who also batted in three other runs to boost his total for the season to 59.

Charley Gehringer's homer with two on in the second off Charley Wagner gave Detroit an early lead, which it extended to 7 to 2 by the seventh, but then the Boston guns started roaring.

Movies Reverse Decision in Dash; Greer Is Winner

New York, June 6 (AP).—Wilbur Greer, of Michigan State, was declared the winner of the 100-yard dash of the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championships, when motion pictures of the event's finish were viewed by the judges today. The decision on the field gave Adrian Talley, captain of the Southern California team, the title.

The reversal of the decision gave Southern California, which won the team title, 46½ points instead of 47½ and increased Michigan State's runner-up score from 24 to 25 points.

Pictures of the finish of the 220-yard dash were also reviewed but there was no change in the order of finish. Edgar Mason, of Pittsburgh, took the race in the meet and the pictures showed him winning by nearly a yard over Talley.

Yanks Nose Browns, 6-5

Knickerbocker, Crosetti Hit for Victory.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 6.—The Yankees wound up their abbreviated series with the tail-end St. Louis Browns today by taking a 6-5 decision on a double by Billy Knickerbocker and single by Frank Crosetti in the eighth inning. Joe DiMaggio's eighth homer of the year, with Crosetti on base, had tied the score an inning before.

The Browns got all their runs in the fourth, on four hits off Rookie Joe Beggs. Red Rolfe's wild throw and two bases on balls issued by Ivy Paul Andrews, who relieved Beggs. After Bill Dickey had pinch-hit for Andrews in the last half of the fourth to drive in the third Yankee run of that frame, Johnny Murphy came to the mound, held the Browns to four hits the rest of the way, and earned credit for the victory.

George Abrams Wins Decision Over Yarosz at Stadium

D. C. Fighter Forces Bout; Verdict Split

Mamakos Beats Harkins in Semiwindup; 2,500 Present.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Combining an Australian crawl stroke with a jolting right hook, and pacing himself like a veteran miler, George Abrams last night passed a milestone in his pugilistic career by outpointing Teddy Yarosz in a 10-round scuffle at Griffith Stadium.

A slim but noisy audience of 2,500 fans paid $2,800 for the privilege of seeing the former middleweight titleholder humbled by the District youth. And they yelled with unrestrained glee when the decision was announced. It was Abrams' twentieth victory in 21 starts—and he richly deserved it.

The green youngster who wasn't supposed to be in Yarosz's class forced the fighting and won all the way. From the first tinkle of the gong to its last dolorous bong the Pittsburgh Pole was a poor second. He fought fitfully, and even these sporadic outbursts failed to disturb the eventual winner's calm demeanor.

LaFond Favored Yarosz.

Referee Eddie LaFond cast the dissenting ballot that made it a split decision, declaring Yarosz the victor by the narrow margin of one point. On The Post's scoresheet Abrams won 5 rounds, Yarosz 3, and 2 were even. One of the latter rightfully belonged to George, but a penalty for hitting in foul territory shaved one of his winning margin.

Yarosz had nothing on the ball last night—nothing, at least, to stop his youthful adversary. His speed was gone. His vounted left hand, the killing punch he demonstrated in the gym for the benefit of a faithful few was futile. He never had an opportunity to bring it into play, because Abrams was a shadowy target and slipped punches like a veteran.

Abrams couldn't have followed instructions from his corner more faithfully than he did last night if he had a book in front of him. He was told to crowd Yarosz, keep punching, keep him off balance, and be careful of the left. He did that and more, outsmarting his more experienced foe on several occasions.

Yarosz Is Penalized.

Yarosz didn't fight a clean fight, and consequently, was penalized heavily. Points thus deducted from his score had no weight in the final decision, however, for Abrams had a comfortable margin without this assistance from the officials.

Abrams started like an 1890 center-rush in football, and finished as strong as a health ad. If any doubt existed concerning the final outcome as late as the tenth round, it vanished in the warm June night as Abrams poured leather on his bewildered opponent's head. The lad's whole fight was a revelation to the customers and a vast improvement over his last.

Yarosz tipped his hand as early as the first round when he failed to fathom Abram's rushing tactics and fell into a clinch. He pawed at George with the left and missed, and Abrams unloosed a volley at his ribs and followed with a stinging right hand to the head.

Punches Lack Steam.

Abrams chased his better-known rival throughout the second, and caught a stiff left on the nose, followed by an overhand right that collided with his exposed chin. Neither shot carried much steam, and George shook them off. The District lad moved in close and resumed his body attack but Yarosz won the round.

Yarosz took the next two rounds, getting better results with his left and plopping a stout right uppercut into George's ribs and body almost at will. Abrams, however, dug into the body with both fists, clinging with bulldog tenacity to his task. Yarosz didn't seem to like it as it suddenly dawned on him that he was in for a rough evening.

The dethroned champion brought down a chorus of cat-calls on his head in the fourth by slipping over a sneak-punch on the break. He carried the round, however, whipping over two good left hooks to the head, and three rights to the body. He began to slip in the fifth, and from then on it was distinctly Abrams' fight. He made his man fight as he wanted him to, kept boring into the body with both hands, and finished with a brilliant effort in the tenth.

In a rough, tough battle typical of all big appearances, Steve Mamakos outpointed Wickey Harkins, of Philadelphia, in an 8-round following the main bout. Harkins butted the District boy in the fifth round, opening a thin cut over the left eye.

Steve survived this wound, however, and staged a bristling rally in the last round to make sure of the verdict. Mamakos weighed 149 pounds and Harkins came in at 150½.

The Preliminaries.

Tommy Hoover (140½), won a unanimous decision over Scotty Smith (145½), of Baltimore, in a four-round curtain raiser.

Bill Bullock (133¾), survived two knock downs in the second round of his six round bout with Joey Temes (136), to win a split decision. Temes won all the way on The Post's score sheet, but Bullock's closing spurt evidently caught the judges' eyes.

Tony Dupre (127½), pounced out an easy six round victory over Abe Denner (130¼). It was a bad match for the tall, ungainly Denner, who had difficulty finding his pint-sized opponent. Abe was willing to mix it up but Dupre kept him at a safe distance throughout. Dupre suffered a cut under the left eye when Denner connected with a right hook in the fifth. Dupre staggered his man with a one-two in the fourth, his best round.

Slav Carries Budge Five Sets In French Hard-Court Net Play

Redhead Wins, 6–2, 8–6, 2–6, 1–6, 6–1, After Terrific Battle With Kukuljevic.

By the Associated Press.

Auteuil, France, June 6.—Central Europe's tennis stars gained five places in the quarter-final round of the French hard court championships today and produced a player who carried World Champion Don Budge to five gruelling sets before the California red-head could survive.

It was the Yugoslavian Davis Cup star, Franz Kukuljevic, who gave Budge a terrific battle before bowing at 6—2, 8—6, 2—6, 1—3, 6—1.

A tireless retriever, Kukuljevic showed his strength first in the second set when he led at 5—4 only to see the American stave off three set points and then go on to win the set in the fourteenth game.

Budge began to net badly in the third set as the Slav's well-placed lobs chased him all around the court. Kukuljevic won that one easily and the next one as well to square the match.

Here Budge settled down, found the range and bombed his way through Kukuljevic in the fifth set to save the match and earn a place in the last eight.

But if Kukuljevic failed to make the grade, central Europe found plenty of consolation as Josip Pallada, Dimitric Mitic and Franz Puncec, all of Yugoslavia, and Roderich Menzel and Franz Cejnar, of Czechoslovakia, qualified for the quarter-finals along with Christian Boussus and Bernard Destremeau, of France. Boussus put out the young Californian, Owen Anderson, 6—4, 6—0, 6—2.

Quarter-final pairings, in order, will send Puncec against Cejnar, Menzel against Mitic, Pallada against Boussus and Budge against Destremeau.

Gene Mako, Budge's doubles partner, scored the only other American victory today. He and Mrs. Harry Hopman, of Australia, won a first round mixed doubles match from Andree Varin and Raymond Billaudot, of France, 6—3, 4—6, 7—5. Anderson and Ruth Jarvis, of England; Mrs. Andrus and Kukuljevic, and Louis Nelson, of the United States, and Ida Adamoff, of France, all were eliminated in this branch of competition.

Mrs. Andrus was beaten in the second round of women's singles by Mrs. Hopman, 6—1, 6—2.

Connolly and Gosnell Tie in Baltimore Golf

Baltimore, June 6 (AP).—J. S. Connolly, Washington, and N. Gosnell, of Rodgers Forge, scored 66s here today to tie for first place in the Midatlantic greenkeepers golf tournament.

The only entrant outside the Maryland-Washington district was James Gantz, of Lancaster, Pa., who scored a 72, not good enough to place. Twelve players entered the tourney, held by the association each month.

Joe Harrison, Regal Neons, was third with two seconds and six thirds, while Ed Blakeney, Heurichs; Bill Krauss, Occidental, and Ollie Pacini, Northeast Temple, were next in line, all unanimous choices.

Closing High School Tilts On Schedule

Eastern Will Meet Tech, Riders Play Wilson This Afternoon.

By Perry Wilkinson.

Two interhigh baseball games, which are scheduled to get under way at 3:30 p. m. today, will usher out the 1938 public school title race as Eastern, defending champions, meets Tech High at Eastern Stadium and Roosevelt engages Woodrow Wilson at Roosevelt Stadium.

Eastern, which has won five straight series battles, will be favored to win over Tech, a team that has won three and lost two, but if the Lincoln Parkers are upset and Roosevelt, as it is expected to do, downs Wilson, the race would be thrown into a tie.

With either Rip Carver or Walter Stockwell on the mound, Coach Guyon's lads should not experience any difficulty with the proteges of Coach Bruce Kessler. Tech's main trouble seems to be a lack of good pitchers, capable of holding the enemy in check, and the superiority of Eastern in this department is enough to warrant a victory for the present titleholders.

With Jack Redinger, who has won four straight series tilts, doing the flinging for Coach Herman Littman, Roosevelt should come out on the long end of the score. Redinger has been the big reason why the Rough Riders are now resting in second place.

Coach Carl Heintel has one hurler, Herman Byer, who has captured two interhigh games, and this youngster will undoubtedly be the choice of Heintel when gametime rolls around. A win for Wilson would give them three wins and three defeats for the present campaign.

Baltimore Loses Again

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Md., June 6.—Seven-hit pitching by Marius Russo enabled the Newark Bears to register their third straight win over the Orioles tonight, 8 to 3.

Keller, Chartak, Seeds and Rosar hit homers in the 11-hit attack on three Oriole pitchers. Seeds' round-tripper was his nineteenth.

The victory stretched the Newark string to 10 and it was the eleventh straight loss for Baltimore.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Three Nats in particular were powerful factors in Washington's triumph over the Indians yesterday and to George Case, Zeke Bonura and Ken Chase go the bulk of the points in the latest Man of the Month contest award.

To Case, three points, because he figured directly in four of the Nats' five runs with his double in the second inning and his triple in the eighth, each of which drove in a run and led to another, and because he also beat out a bunt and made a clever steal of third that figured in a run.

To Bonura, three points, because after contributing a single and a triple to the Nats' early inning attack, he broke up the ball game with a two-bagger in the eleventh.

To Chase, three points, because, until the Indians tied the score against him in the ninth, he had allowed only three hits, and in the tenth he quelled a Cleveland threat after putting the first man up on base.

To Joe Krakauskas, one point, because his eleventh-inning performance was a brilliant display of pinch-pitching following Earl Averill's double that opened the inning.

THE SCORE:

Buddy Myer	7	Ken Chase	3
Pete Appleton	6	George Case	3

Miss Jameson Wins Medal

Patty Berg, Mrs. Newbold Next at Tulsa.

Oakhurst County Club, Tulsa, Okla., June 6 (AP).—Smooth-playing Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, led the field today with a 78, one under women's par, to win medalist honors and become an odds-on choice to retain her championship of women's trans-Mississippi golf.

Four golfers found themseves tied up with 94 at the end of 18 holes after 29 places in the championship flight were assured by scores of 93 or better.

In the sudden-death playoff, Alice Daniels of Fort Worth, 14-year-old baby of the tournament, scored a brilliant par 4 on No. 2. Mrs. J. L. Wilson of Oakhurst, went out of the running with a six, and Margaret Thompson, Oakhurst, and Mrs. Vincent Hoechst, of Dallas, were "in" on the championship flight with fives.

Miss Thompson took the thirty-first place in the flight by scoring a four on the second hole of the playoff while Mrs. Hoechst took five for thirty-second position.

Grouped behind Betty with 81 were Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Pat Newbold, of Wichita, Kansas State champion and winner of the Transmiss in 1932.

Next on the list were the veteran Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City and Sarah Guth, of St. Louis. Each carded an 82.

Nat Notes

Griffith Calls Turn on Whitehill; Case Is Batting Star.

Clark Griffith established himself as something of a prophet yesterday when he predicted that the Nats would beat Earl Whitehill.

"He's a five-run pitcher," said Griffith before the game. "We figure to get that many runs against him."

The Nats' owner was not entirely correct. The Nats scored five runs, but only four against Whitehill. Griffith, however, claimed complete vindication.

"Don't forget, Whitehill only pitched seven and a third innings," he said after the game. "On the basis of nine innings, we'd have made those five runs against him."

When Hudlin took up the pitching for Cleveland in the eighth he was aiming for his second victory in two days. As a relief pitcher on Sunday he gained credit for Cleveland's triumph in the second game of the series.

Manager Oscar Vitt batted .500 yesterday in his tactics against Zeke Bonura. In the fifth inning he ordered Johnny Stone purposely passed and then saw his strategy work out nicely when Bonura grounded out with the bases full. But in the eleventh when Vitt attempted the same maneuver, Bonura broke up the ball game.

The Nats had four runs to show for their efforts until the eleventh inning and George Case made all of 'em possible. His double in the second inning was directly responsible for the Nats' first two runs and his triple in the sixth produced two more.

Today the St. Louis Browns open a two-day invasion at Griffith Stadium and Manager Bucky Harris has Dutch Leonard and his knuckle ball dusted off and ready to send against 'em. Leonard will be seeking his third straight victory.

Unless all signs fail, young Howard Mills, the rookie left-hander who beat the Nats, 4-3, in St. Louis, will be Manager Gabby Street's pitching choice. In which case, the Nats will use the same right-handed batting order that beat the Indians yesterday.

Giants Whip Reds, 11-2; ShakeSlump

Schumacher Wins 4th Game; Berger Traded for Kampouris.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 6.—The New York Giants wound up their series with the Reds today in commendable fashion. Not only did Manager Billy Terry end his search for a second baseman by acquiring Alex Kampouris in a straight trade for Wally Berger, but his terriers let loose a 15-hit attack that swamped the Reds, 11 to 2.

The victory ended a six-game losing streak for the New Yorkers, and sent them on to Chicago, where they open a four-game series tomorrow, only two percentage points behind the league-leading Cubs.

The Giants started hitting early, for they drove Southpaw Al Hollingsworth to the showers with five runs in the first, picked up another off Ray Davis in the second and one more in the seventh, they finished off with a four-run barrage against Lefty Grissom in the eighth. Mel Ott led that one with his twelfth home run of the year, scoring two mates ahead of him.

With all that batting support, Hal Schumacher breezed along to his fourth victory of the year. The big right-hander gave the Reds only eight hits, one a second-inning homer by Ernie Lombardi. In the fourth Buck McCormick's double and Harry Craft' triple produced the other Cincinnati score.

Tuleyries Lin Wins by Neck in Feature Race at Charles Town

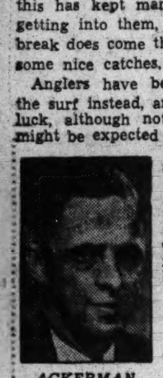
Outdoors

With

Bill Ackerman.

The bluefish that have been striking rather consistently at Ocean City for the past two weeks have moved offshore. With the kind of weather we have had, this has kept many boats from getting into them, but when the break does come there should be some nice catches.

Anglers have been fishing in the surf instead, and having fair luck, although not up to what might be expected at this season.



ACKERMAN.

Two, three and up to five channel bass is about the ordinary catch, with one report from Selby Purnell of 11, caught on Fox Hill Levels near his Pine Tree Gun Club.

The trout and kings, which had also started to hit along the beach, have been slowed up somewhat by the easterly weather, but not so much but what one can take a mess most any time.

The big yellow-bellied trout have started to take the angler's offerings offshore, not quite so large as they might be, but we have never heard anyone beef about fish that run four and five pounds; yet they will be larger than that before the month is out.

The first red and blue pennant of the Ocean City Game Fishing Association was run to the yard of Capt. Jim Lombard's Jim Dandy last week, with some 25 other captains following. It is expected that before the marlin season gets under way, practically every charter boatman, and many boat owners as well, will be flying this flag, that stands for the promotion of sport fishing off the Maryland coast, the awarding of trophies for the best fish of almost every species caught there during the season, and to encourage "fair and just dealings between fishing guides and sportsmen."

This last, coupled with the fact that every boat in the association is passed upon for seaworthiness and its necessary equipment, is a real step for the betterment of angling in a fishing area we have felt would take its place in the piscatorial world with the catching of the first white marlin by Paul and Jack Townsend several years ago.

* * * *

Just how the organization hopes to get over the hurdle of holding reservations for out-of-town parties with whom they are not acquainted we don't know.

We still believe our suggestion of last year, of telegraphing one-third the first day's charter, is about the simplest way—to show on the part of the angler good intention, while the very fact that the boatman receives it shows he expects to be ready for the party and carry out his part of the bargain. And both sides have a receipt of record.

Any angler with good intentions will not hesitate to show it in this way. He is playing safe in having a boat ready for him on his arrival. If he is not sure of being able to make the trip until the last minute then the chance of being able to get a boat should be his lookout, and not placed on the shoulders of the captains—to lose a day, or scurry around at the last minute to get another charter.

A letter from Capt. White at Yorktown, noting his catches of croakers running as high as 300 with here and there a reasonably large sea trout. No cabio as yet, nor blues. He is but two hours' run from Cape Charles and fishes it right along for channel bass, but when they are running right off York Spit, there is certainly no need to take such a long run, although it is good trolling all the way.

* * * *

Capt. R. T. Selph notes some blues are off his home port of Westland, but the weather has been so consistently bad there has been none out for them. This is a good cabio section when they get going, which shouldn't be long now.

Late in the week at Solomons, Capt. Ed Bowen got into the hardheads to the tune of 175 with the sea so heavy it was almost impossible to fish, but the catch of his mother, Mrs. Florence Bowen, who also likes to go out after them once in a while, on Friday was just about tops for this season.

Fishing from noon until about 4:30, the box was filled to running over, with more than 500 hardheads, and of right good size.

Meeting tonight in the office of former Senator Harry Hawes, in the Transportation Building, of the National Capital Casting Club, to decide whether or not the organization is to stay in existence. Go tonight, or ever after hold your peace.

Meeting of the Washington Chapter Izaak Walton League also, in the Elizabethan room of the Raleigh at 8 p. m.

Rock were breaking all day Sunday, off Cedar Point at the mouth of the Patuxent, in mid-summer style. Several were taken on improvised lures. Had there been a few yellow Florida feathers on the boats it is very probable the catches would have run high.

Spittenimage Takes Place After Battle

Winner Pays $12 Ticket; Charming Boy Brings $90.80 Price.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 6.—Getting to the front in the opening jumps, Taleyries Lin hot-footed around the Charles Town course to win the Endless Caverns Purse, outstanding event on today's eight-race program.

The little daughter of Dunlin, operating under the colors of Mrs. E. L. Bull, answered every urge of Jockey Buddy Root and shook off three challenges to finish a neck ahead of H. R. Dulaney, jr.'s Spittenimage. A length and a half farther back came Idle Elf, one of the day's several beaten tips, to be third in the field of six.

Calude Feltner, one of the youngest trainers on the grounds, saddled Tuleyries Lin, his eighth winner of the meeting. The filly stepped the "about" 6 furlongs route in a capable 1:17 4-5 and paid $12.

Racing conditions were ideal and 4,000 took part in the wash-day sport. The program was marked by a spill in the first race in which Apprentice Jockey Beverly Hacker suffered cuts and bruises. Hacker was aboard Trip when the filly stumbled and unseated him. He was rushed to the Charles Town Hospital.

Indiana had the best of the start and after a slight battle gave up as Root took Tuleyries Lin to the top. Eblis then moved up to challenge and it was not until approaching the stretch that the ultimate winner could shake off this rival. Root kept pressing Tuleyries Lin but stuck to her guns. It was well that she did for Spittenimage rushed up to try to collar her. In the stretch run, Spittenimage gained so much and no more. Root went to the whip and Tuleyries Lin held her rival safe.

The first race brought one of the longest prices of the meeting when Charming Boy, a first-time starter, led virtually all the way to pay a $90.80 mutuel. Bursting and Needmore followed the winner across the line. Charming Boy, fresh off the farm, is owned and trained by L. Beavers.

The worst start of the meeting marked the second race, Brainchild bouncing out the gate before the others were ready. Jockey Johnny Shanks, Washington boy, made the most of the break and opened a long lead, never to be threatened. His backers took down a $12.40 mutuel. Green Water and Happy Chase were closest at the end.

Shebang, in the colors of H. B. Dulaney, jr., accounted for the third race, finishing a neck in advance of Star Magic. Canteret was third in the limit field of eight. Shebang bore into Canteret in the stretch run and then went on to take care of Star Magic. The winner paid $7.20.

Shaggy Ann made good for the favorite players in the fourth event. With Leon Garrett in the saddle, the popular mare dug around the oval and downed, among others, Heart Play and Canynge. She paid $4.60.

Bar Fly Scores At Suffolk Downs

Boston, June 6 (AP).—E. R. Bradley's Bar Fly and the Rosedale Stable's Kentucky Blues accounted for the victories today in the two feature races at Suffolk Downs before 14,156 spectators.

Bar Fly captured the Hotel Brunswick Purse, a mile allowance affair for 3-year-olds, winning by a nose in a finish that required a camera decision. Bar Fly was timed in 1:36.2.

Kentucky Blues scored in the Lynn Purse, a 6-furlong allowance affair for 4-year-olds and upward.

Bar Fly paid $3.20 to win, Sea Voyage $4.00 to place, and Landlubber $3.40 to show.

Kentucky Blues paid $6.40 to win, while holding that spot by two lengths and a half over H. E. Enger's Zoic, which brought $2.60 to place. A length away was the Medway Stable's Odd Blue, paying $2.60 to show.

Dear Al: Selections at Charles Town.

Trainer Charlie Beall said Monday he had "fired" Lyconna, his 2-year-old. G. Campbell arrived from Pimlico with two horses, Shorts and Tiny Mite. W. J. Hughes, who shipped Sun Voter to Wheeling, brought that horse back yesterday. Sun Voter ran last in his lone start on the other side of the State. Tommy Fowler, the jockey, also returned from Wheeling. W. Camac has sent Hurry Home to Suffolk Downs. C. M. Feltner and his son, Claude, had won 17 races between them since the meeting began. Bluey, out of the money in Monday's first race, was one of the hottest tips of the meeting. The Dunlin filly opened at 15 to 1 and was backed into favoritism. Apprentice Jockey Beverly Hacker was going great guns until he was injured yesterday. The little fellow has been a pet with the women bettors since the meeting began and everybody is pulling for him to get back in action real soon. Apprentice E. Jones is a Charles Town boy. Jockey E. Gault was one pound overweight here Saturday on a horse carrying 122 pounds. This was his first mount in several years. Reds Riggs has been added to the track police force.

BILL.

First race—Mohongo has been educated in recent races and seems capable of graduating from the maiden ranks in this field. Onimod may be better than generally rated. Killy may take care of the others.

Second race—Look Forward, second on the also eligible list, ran well until getting in trouble last out. With clear sailing, I expect this one to score. Take Off has the most speed of those assured a place at the starting gate. Anywoman is cheap but may get in the pay-off. Lady Buck is too far down the list, but would take it all if in action.

Third race—Petee Lad should go well in this field. Seems capable of carrying the top weight, especially if Palumbo rides. Little Percy clicked last out and is dangerous. Tuleyries Lad to account for the third money.

Fourth race—Tedmella will appreciate the improved track conditions and probably is ready for a real effort. Royal Business turned in a good race last out and deserves attention. Meridian Time turned in a neat victory last week and should be a keen factor.

Fifth race—Sylvia G. gets in this with a 102-pound feather and may come through with that long-awaited set of brackets. Happy Road did all asked in that most recent start. Ado is good now, but that 121 pounds may prove too much.

Sixth race—Aufoin runs nothing but honest races. That last was a brilliant try that collected second money. The distance appears to be right. Huppy is in excellent form now and must be respected. Stepee finds the right route here and could take it all.

Seventh race—Famous Clayton is one of the most improved horses on the grounds. Needs only to repeat that last. Flying Carpet will be a factor if taken off the also eligible list. Bay Wrack is getting in shape and could surprise.

Substitute race—Schley Buck, Miss Toucan, Radial is the way I prefer them if this event is used.

Best bet—Tedmella.

WPA Hurts Contractors, Williams Says

Many Have Been Forced Out of Business, He Charges.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

By reason of disregard of private initiative and economic benefits to communities from use of the contract system, the Works Progress Administration has robbed the field of legitimate contractors to the extent that many of them of long experience have been forced out of business. So charged S. M. Williams, president, Bureau of Contract Information, Inc., in an address before Washington Building Congress yesterday at the Lafayette Hotel.

Speaking on "Establishing the Responsibility of Contractors and Are Their Profits Reasonable?" Mr. Williams asserted foregoing conditions have unnecessarily robbed contractors of their opportunities, thereby creating an uneconomic competitive situation, which has forced many other contractors to bid at cost, or below, in order to keep the personnel of their organizations employed upon at least some basis.

Reviewing former abuses in the construction field, he reminded that with the beginning of appropriations for public construction, covering building and engineering, wide authority was given to those responsible for the award of contracts in determining the qualifications of bidders for the performance of such.

"In accepting these responsibilities," he declared, "many of the public officials became fearful of criticism from the public if they awarded a contract to other than the low bidder. Therefore, they passed the responsibility to the surety companies, with the result that if a low bidder on a public engineering or building project could secure a performance bond, he was generally awarded the con-

Fair Weather Pulls Down Wheat Prices

Indications That Winter Crop Will Mature Ahead of Rust.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 6.—Predictions of favorable weather conditions for crops in areas where black rust has been a menace forced Chicago wheat prices down 1¼ cents maximum today.

The fall of values was regarded as measuring a betterment of chances that the bulk of domestic winter wheat Southwest would mature ahead of rust. Whether this hoped-for outcome will actually take place, however, cannot be decided for about ten days.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½-⅞ lower than Saturday's finish, July 71⅛-¼, September 72⅝-½, corn ⅜-⅝ down, July 56¾, September 57⅝, oats ⅜-½ off, rye showing ½-¾ drop, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to 5 cents advance.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Gain Further in Moderate Activity; U. S. Government Bonds Higher.

New York, June 6.—For the first time in over a week the stock market advanced on two successive days. Best prices were reached at midday. Stock turnover was around a half million shares. Most of the activity took place in periods of rising prices. Commodities were mixed. Cotton and wheat were softer. July wheat closed ⅞ of a cent down at 71⅛ cents a bushel. United States bonds moved ahead on general approval of the terms of the midmonth financing.

On a mixture of Federal spending, large crops and the prospect of a legislative holiday, stock prices carried further the improvement that began last week. Farm machinery, metal, steel and chemical shares were the favorites. Many in these groups rose 1 point or more early in the trading and held on well to the close. Gold mining stocks kept a firm tone, but were less active, partly because of the holiday in foreign markets, where much of the gold speculation is taking place.

Stocks were not uniform in their price movements. The strong issues were Steel, du Pont, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, General Electric, Sears Roebuck and American Smelting. United Corporation preferred broke more than 4 points on suspension of the dividend. Large blocks of the stock changed hands. Gillette Safety Razor receded into new low ground. New high prices were paid for du Pont preferred and a few other preferred shares.

It was easier to accept the uncertain firmness of prices and the slack volume of business in the markets today than it was to explain the flurry of strength at the week-end. Saturday's rally undoubtedly promoted buying for a further rise this morning and most sections of the market moved forward a little, but when new business failed to appear in large quantity, the enthusiasm subsided.

Politics.

Markets are now largely under political influence. They have behind them two legislative acts, one of which ought to be helpful and the other ought to give the speculative imagination something to play with. It might even add to a business pickup later in the year, provided one gets under way on the large crop movement and the completion of inventory shakedown, price reductions and lowering of costs to meet the present temper of consumers' purchasing power.

The new tax bill's provisions give business something more solid upon which to build than did the old undistributed profits tax and capital gains tax. Pump-priming appropriations are now a fact and spending will proceed merrily, but it may be considerable of a task for Federal officials, squabbling over how best to buy votes, to fill enough pockets to give motor car, radio and other buying much of a fillip for a few months.

Meanwhile Congress is about to adjourn, and that is mighty cheering. If it could go home without passing the wage-hour bill the market would be entitled to a good recovery, and out of sheer relief it may have it anyway. The wage-hour bill in any event may prove to be a dud, but wages can only be paid provided work can be found, no matter what floors and ceilings are established.

Business.

Business developments over the week-end were of no great importance. This week's operating rate of the steel industry will be a shade above that of last week, according to the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute. The steel industry's experience may tend to support the theory that the business depression is on bottom, but that leaves open the question of how long it may stay there. Business men cannot go on indefinitely losing money, and as they drop out of the tax paying ranks the day of real inflation will come nearer.

The Treasury's announcing of its new financing for the June 15 tax date was as expected, since the market already had been told that no new cash would be raised this time. June and September maturities will be met with refunding issues. While the Treasury boasts of the fact that the interest rates on the refunding issues a: at new low records for comparable securities, the fact loses most of its significance so far as Treasury credit is concerned.

Uniform Bank Examination Plan Is Drafted

Report Goes to President; Reserve Board's Dissent Hinted.

A majority report on uniform bank examinations, agreed upon by State bank examiners, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency is to be submitted to President Roosevelt this week, it was revealed yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

However, there were indications that the Federal Reserve Board may file a report of its own, disagreeing to some extent with the majority recommendations.

The majority report recommends a uniform method of valuing bond investments and replacement of loan classifications of "slow," "doubtful" and "loss" with the Roman numerals I, II and III. The first four grades of investment bonds will be carried on the portfolio at cost rather than market value, while other classifications will be written down to market value.

It was learned that the Reserve Board is willing to go along on classification of loans contained in the majority report, but has its own views regarding valuation of bank investment portfolios. The Reserve Board is opposed to a standard method for evaluating securities for examination purposes. Specifically, it is opposed to use of market values, believing that the judgment of the bank examiner should be considered in many cases, as for example appraisement of local securities which a bank carries on its books.

Answering a hypothetical question, Mr. Morgenthau pointed out that it is not necessary for the reserve board "to go along" on the report. He said he was "still hopeful that the committee might obtain joint action."

"For the first time I see daylight on it," Mr. Morgenthau said when asked if the committee had made any progress on the problem. "From the information I got last Friday," he continued, "it seems to me as if we can move toward uniform bank examination."

Agreement Attained Friday.

Agreement in uniform examination was attained last Friday by the executive committee of the National Association of Bank Supervisors of State Banks after the interdepartmental committee studied the problem for about a month.

On April 25, Mr. Morgenthau disclosed that the Administration was studying the problem of obtaining uniformity without legislation. At that time it was said that if this was successful it would be the basis for consolidating the government's bank supervisory authorities.

July Cotton Drops to 7.90, Bombay Sells

Final Prices 15 to 17 Points Lower for Day's Trading.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 6.—Bombay straddle selling and liquidation depressed cotton today. October sold off from 8.05 to 7.94 and closed at 7.95. Final prices were 15 to 17 points net lower. Today's trend carried prices off slightly more than $1 a bale from the high point touched on the recovery last Saturday.

The market opened 6 to 9 points lower in sympathy with disappointing Bombay cables. Pressure in July from domestic and foreign sources was the chief bearish factor. A fair amount of trade and spot house buying developed on reactions, but rallies were feeble.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was a shade easier today under local selling promoted by the easiness of lard and cotton. Final prices were 3 to 5 points net lower with sales of only 35 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; July closed 7.87; September, 7.64; October, 7.55; December, 7.53; January, 7.55.

WPA Hurts Contractors, Williams Says

Many Have Been Forced Out of Business, He Charges.

tract, regardless of the contractor's qualifications."

"The public," he explained, "had not awakened to the result to their communities from a defaulted contract; first, in delay in the use of the improvement, and second, in losses to those in the communities who had extended credit to the defaulting contractor who was not able to meet his obligations incurred in the attempted performance of the contract."

Bureau Services.

Describing his organization and its work, he said, "the Bureau of Contract Information was organized as an independent, impartial, fact-finding institution. Its service, covering contract performance investigation and establishing the standing of those bidding for and undertaking construction work, is available to those responsible for the award of public and private construction work without charge, but in exchange for information covering the performance of contracts awarded by the various interests. In rendering such reports, they include only information which has been verified, and are then disclosed without recommendation, favor or prejudice.

"Primarily," he explained, "the work of the bureau is in the interest of the public, because such interest can only be protected in the elimination of all doubt of proper qualification to insure the satisfactory performance of construction work. Therefore, the bureau is annually rendering thousands of reports to those awarding construction contracts, which include Federal, State and municipal officials, architects, and engineers throughout the entire country.

"In the nine years of its operation," he recalled, "the bureau has, through the co-operation of awarding authorities, surety companies and organizations representing construction, been able to defeat the award of more than 1,500 individual construction projects to low bidders where there was definite doubt as to the proper qualifications of such bidders to insure the satisfactory performance of the contracts in the interest of the public. These contracts were awarded to higher bidders at increases over low bids as much as $159,499.

"The 'Special Co-operative Service' of the bureau and the 'Personnel Record of the Construction Industry,' as compiled by the bureau with the definite co-operation of surety companies and awarding authorities, have been very important factors in this accomplishment," he said.

G-Man Cleared Of Contempt in Harlan Trial

Defense Had Accused Agent of Interfering With Evidence Seekers.

By the Associated Press.

London, Ky., June 6.—The Government scored its second victory of the day when Federal Judge H. Church Ford tonight dismissed a citation for contempt of court against J. M. O'Leary, Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, who was accused by the defense in the Harlan labor conspiracy trial of interfering with the gathering of defense evidence.

Earlier Judge Ford had reversed a previous decision and held the Government could introduce as evidence testimony given by certain of the present defendants when they were witnesses before National Labor Relations Board hearings.

The decision was announced following a 15-minute conference between opposing attorneys at the judge's bench. Both sides concurred.

"All defendants and all witnesses are under the protection of the court during the trial," Judge Ford said.

"That does not mean any immunity from proper prosecution or immediate process if a recommendation is made in line with such action. But before any party is arrested, faced with any criminal process or in any way subjected to arrest, leave of the court first must be obtained and the necessity for such action shown."

The contempt motion, asking also that Government lawyers and other F. B. I. men be instructed to "desist" from further arrests, was filed Thursday, echoing the arrest on the previous day of Lee Hubbard and Merle Middleton, former Harlan deputies and defendants at this trial, on charges of conspiring to suborn perjury.

O'Leary's investigation preceded the arrests. The Government charged Middleton, Hubbard and Sammie Thomas, of Ages, Ky., arrested with them, were attempting to obtain perjured affidavits. The defense said they were merely engaged in getting defense evidence, which they said they could not do before the trial because the Government did not file a bill of particulars. Thomas has no connection with the conspiracy case.

Baltimore Line Aid Blocked in House

Objections blocked yesterday efforts of Representative Hamilton (Democrat), of Virginia, to force continued operation of the Baltimore Mail Line on its present route from Baltimore and Hampton Roads to European ports.

The objections, by three representatives whose names were not recorded, removed from the House calendar Hamilton's bill, which would have directed the Maritime Commission to reject the line's proposed withdrawal from the service and to pay the company differences between its authorized subsidy and operating costs.

Bob Burns Says—

I think everybody should spend some time in a city jest to kinda complete their education and social training. Everybody is so busy scratchin' out a living that he doesn't have time to even find out who his neighbors are, let alone what they are doing.

One time one of them city fellas come down home to live and due to his city training, he kept pretty much to himself. One day, some of his neighbors called on the chief of police and says, "we want you to keep an eye on that new fella that lives in our neighborhood—there's somethin' mighty suspicious about the way he minds his own business."

U. S. Overrates Leaders, A. U. Graduates Told

Morris Cooke Is Speaker; Senator Wheeler, Burke Honored.

American democracy is menaced by an "increasing tendency toward over-estimation of the top man in all organizations," from the President of the United States to the foreman of a road gang, Morris Llewellyn Cooke, Philadelphia engineer, last night told an audience of 1,000 at American University commencement exercises.

"Overrating our leaders both stultifies and burdens them," Cooke said, and "detracts from the essential dignity and status of everybody below . . . It is impossible to build an effective organization on the false assumption that the top knows all and orders all."

"We humans are still too much under the illustion that the physically strong head of the tribe is still with us," he observed. "This makes all sorts of spectacular 'build-ups' easy for the superficial and incompetent."

Says Nation, Corporation Alike.

Under a modern democratic organization, whether an entire nation or a commercial firm, "authority should stream up from those who command the local facts quite as much as down from those who, because of position, are compelled to make final and inclusive decisions," he declared.

"This area of impersonal control must be broadened."

Cooke's address on "Governmental and Industrial Administration in a Democracy" was heard by Senator Edward Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, who were honored with the doctor of laws degree. Other recipients of the LL. D. were Louis Brownlow, director of the Public Administration Clearing House in Chicago, and Frederick H. Stinchfield, of Minneapolis, past president of the American Bar Association.

Before the conferring of honorary degrees, Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray handed diplomas to 124 graduates, the largest graduating class ever to leave American University. The group included four doctors of philosophy and 14 masters of arts.

New Degree Awarded.

Awarded for the first time in the institution's history, the degree, bachelor of science in public administration, went to Esther Mildred Arneson, Catherine Arnold Midelburg and Arthur Zauft.

Carol Laise, of Washington, received the college honor prize, given to the senior who has made the largest contribution to the university during four years. The Alpha Chi Omega Achievement award went for the second year to Mary Elizabeth Morse, of Lakewood, Ohio.

Other awards, announced from the platform, were two faculty prizes, Lemuel Fraser and Jean Evans, both juniors; history prize, Frances Hill, freshman; chemistry prize, David Copenhafer; freshman prize, Mary Hudson; honorable mention, Daniel Wentz; senior semester honors, Mary Evaul, Jane Getz, Carol Laise, Carl Mueller and Raymond Wrenn; French prize, Barbara Loomis, and Pan-Hellenic Council award, Eloise Swick.

Five Fellowships Announced.

The Swift Foundation fellowship for 1938-39 was assigned to George Arkell Riggan. Massey Foundation fellowships went to W. C. D. Pacey for the study of English literature at the University of London, and Wilfred Cantwell Smith for research on modern Orientals at Cambridge University. Louise Elizabeth Meixner will spend next year at the University of Rome, under the Italian-American Maintenance Exchange. An Italian student has not yet been selected for study at American University. Albert Philip Ingraham was announced as recipient of a University Fellowship in political science.

Federal Spending Tops $7,000,000,000 Mark

The Treasury said yesterday its spending in the fiscal year which began last July 1 has passed $7,000,000,000.

With less than a month of the year remaining, however, expenditures, including debt retirement, were $800,000,000 below the amount budgeted for the complete 12 months.

Spending, to date, has exceeded income by $1,498,917,023.

Scenes as American University Graduates Largest Class

Post Staff Photos.

Lutheran Church Of Bethesda Sets Huge Sunset Rites

A sunset program of worship, religious drama and pageantry, in which hundreds of District youth are expected to participate, will feature first services on the recently acquired site for the Christ Lutheran Church of Bethesda, June 19, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Claude S. Stanton, chairman of the arrangements committee.

Luther Leagues of the American Lutheran Church of this area are sponsors of the program, which will be held on grounds surrounding the Victorian home at the corner of Glenbrook and Georgetown roads, which is being converted into a modern church.

The congregation, which was founded about three years ago by the Rev. Henry Whiting, has been meeting in the State Theater.

The building committee, under chairmanship of Guy Watkins, will meet Friday night to consider architect's drawings. E. Emerson Snyder is finance chairman.

Police Court Staff, Freed of Echoes, Faces 'Bombing'

Gone is the thunderous echo which formerly resounded through the clerk's office of the new Police Court Building.

In its place has come a soft thudding sound. Composition accoustical blocks were nailed to the ceiling Saturday after Police Court employes had complained they simply couldn't hear themselves think for the hollow reverberations set up in the office by the softest whisper.

They had scarcely become accustomed to the new soundproofing yesterday morning when—clunk!—a sizable accoustical block left the ceiling and landed right on Supervising Clerk Charles W. Middleton.

The gentle bombardment continued intermittently throughout the day. Middleton and his associates are wondering whether it is better to be clunked by accoustical blocks or deafened by the old familiar echo.

Class in Religion Urged for Schools

Christian religious teaching in American schools was advocated yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Code, professor of history at Catholic University, in a commencement address at Nazareth College, Louisville, Ky.

"In returning to the original American idea of education—on religious principles — American Protestantism will be co-operating with American Catholicism in the only successful element to keep this country a republic," said Dr. Code.

"Should Protestantism fail to co-operate with Catholicism," he added, "then Catholicism will have to go on alone, even if she has to travel the road of martyrdom as she is doing in Russia, Germany, Austria and Mexico."

Dr. Code said that 'it is only through the Catholic philosophy of inalienable human rights taking precedence over national welfare" that the United States is prevented "from becoming another Russia, Germany, Mexico or Italy."

D.C. Court to Shift Cases to Bentley

Felony cases now pending in the United States District Court will be shifted to the Juvenile Court, where the age of the defendant brings him within the limits of the new Juvenile Court bill, it was decided at a conference of United States Attorney David A. Pine, several assistants, and Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court.

As rapidly as Pine can determine cases that were pending when the act was passed and where the defendant was, upon the indictment return date, 18 or under, they will be shifted to the Juvenile Court.

A. F. of L. to Dramatize Labor Events for Radio

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor has gone in for radio drama.

An experiment started last March has resulted in arrangements to broadcast recordings of dramatized labor events from 55 stations, A. F. of L. spokesmen said yesterday.

The recordings will be put on the air once a month for 15-minute periods. The federation is underwriting the cost of producing the records, but the air time is being provided without charge.

Man on Crutches Testifies He Tried To Stop a Battle

Melvin Selby of 930 Burns street southeast hobbled into Police Court on crutches yesterday to give his version of an argument in which he allegedly intervened as peacemaker and which left him with deep slashes in his leg. Charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, Ralph V. Weaver, of 1841 Kalorama road northwest, a participant in the debate, was held for grand jury action under $500 bond.

On Friday night in a poolroom in the 1100 block of Eighth street southeast, Selby told Judge Walter J. Casey, he stepped between Weaver and a third man to prevent an exchange of blows. When he got himself untangled from Weaver Selby discovered his leg was cut above and below the knee.
